Aleman Wins Loan Pledge, Gets Ovation In Congress

A Weak Democracy Lures Dictators, Mexican President Tells Legislators

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Miguel Aleman yesterday won the promise of a United States loan to bolster Mexico's economy.

A little later he went before a cheering, whistling Congress and declared that it is the weak democracy that lures the dictator.

He said that there should be, in addition to the policy of the Good Neighbor, "an economy of the Good Neighbor and a culture of the Good Neighbor."

"Whatever Mexico and the United States achieve in this respect will profit our two countries . . .

"We have learned that democracy, if not backed by force, whets the appetite of dictators, and that the most powerful force to uphold democracy lies not in tanks and ordnance, but in the conviction of the men, who when conflict finally breaks out, will drive the tanks and fire the cannon . . ."

Leaves for New York

President Aleman, hero of the greatest reception ever given a foreigner in Washington, was to leave for New York at midnight.

He concluded his whirlwind three-day tour by attending an intimate dinner at the White House. Here President Truman awarded him the Legion of Merit, Degree of Chief Commander. In the late afternoon Don Miguel held a press conference in the Blair Lee House.

President Truman and President Aleman, in a joint statement issued at noon, announced the Export-Import Bank was prepared to approve additional credits to Mexico. The loan, it was explained, would be used in "financing a number of projects laid before it (the bank) by the Mexican government—projects which are designed to make the greatest and earliest contribution to the economy of Mexico."

The two chief executives said they were agreed that their respective administrations must exert all efforts to raise the standards of living in their countries by increasing productivity and, consequently, the purchasing power of their peoples."

They announced, in this connection, that they concurred in the desirability of signing a new agreement to stabilize the rate of exchange between the peso and the dollar.

The amount to be advanced to Mexico by the Export-Import Bank was not disclosed, but it was indicated that the initial credit will be at least 50 million dollars.

The Mexican government has applied for credits of between 150 million and 175 million dollars, the money to be used for development of power, irrigation and industrial projects.

Mexico also has applied to the World Bank for a loan of more than 208 million dollars.

President Aleman, talking to reporters at the Blair-Lee House, said the initial credits would be used largely on irrigation work to increase Mexico's food supply.

Peace Rumors Fly on Phone Strike Fronts

Back-to-Work Move In N. Y. Collapses as $4 Raise Is Rejected

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The twenty-fifth day of the Nation-wide telephone strike broke out with a rash of peace rumors yesterday.

A back-to-work movement, begun in New York Wednesday, collapsed yesterday when the rank and file of a group of local unions rejected a $4 a week raise settlement.

Associated Press reported from New York that both sides agreed that only a small percentage of the 37,000 strikers involved had gone back to work yesterday, as required by the "settlement."

Four Dollars Held Insufficient

The membership of the New York unions, in effect, told their leaders they would not crash the picket lines of 19,000 strikers not affected by the "settlement"; and that the $4 increase in pay was not enough.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, which sponsored the Nation-wide walkout of 340,000, flew to New York yesterday to address the unaffiliated New York unions whose leaders had agreed to the "settlement."

Beirne urged the rank and file to stay out, and hold out with the 39 NFTW affiliates for $6 a week boost in wages.

In Washington, negotiations were continued between key affiliates of NFTW and key subsidiaries of the Bell Telephone System in an effort to find a peace formula.

The long-lines negotiations, which came up with the magic formula last year, once again were the center of speculation, with a new session beginning at 9 last night.

Locally, the strike of 6000 workers against the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. continued in deadlock.

Airliner Wins In Close Race With Stork

The stork proved no match for an American Airlines plane yesterday.

As a result a Warrenton, Va., woman, en route to New York, was landed at Philadelphia in time to have her baby with medical assistance.

The woman, Mrs. Anna Hufnagle, 33, accompanied by her husband, Fred, and a son, Fred jr., 5, was traveling from Washington to New York to visit the Hufnagle's family physician.

"The baby was not expected until May 23," Hufnagle said. "But on the plane it appeared that she was going to be a lot earlier than that. I told the captain and he made an emergency landing at Philadelphia."

Mrs. Hufnagle was rushed to the Fitzgerald Mercy Hospital at 8:49 a. m. and gave birth to a 6½-pound girl two hours later. The child will be named Ann Marie.

The father is manager of a taxicab service owned by Walter P. Chrysler, jr., at Warrenton. Capt. W. Magli piloted the plane.

Aviation Pact Signed By Argentina and U. S.

Buenos Aires, May 1 (U.P.).—The United States and Argentina today signed an aviation agreement including the "five freedoms of the air" and representing a complete reversal of previous Argentine commercial aviation policy.

The five freedoms—basis of all air transport agreements negotiated by the United States since the end of the war—are the rights to fly over the country, land for refueling or other technical reasons, carry passengers to the country with which the agreement is made, carry passengers back to the home country and pick up and discharge traffic in other countries along the route. Negotiations were carried on by James M. Landis, chairman of the U. S. Civil Aeronautics Board.

25,000 Rally To Pray for World Peace

Msgr. Sheen Hails Catholic Audience as 'Blue Revolutionists'

An estimated 25,000 persons took part in a Catholic May Day celebration here yesterday and heard themselves called "Blue Revolutionists."

They were urged to pray for their protagonists, the Red Revolutionists, for the Russian people and for America.

The celebration was sponsored by the Society for the Propagation of the Faith for the Washington Metropolitan Area. It was held at the Sylvan Theater under the shadow of Washington Monument.

"Blue Revolutionists"

"We are the 'Blue Revolutionists' because we trace our origin to the Lady of the Blue," the Right Rev. Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen of Catholic University declared.

He then contrasted the "Blue Revolutionists" to Communists for whom May Day is a traditional holiday.

He compared persecution of Catholics in Communist-dominated eastern Europe to that of ancient Rome and predicted that Moscow may some day become "a great center of the Faith" much as Rome which persecuted Christians became the seat of the Church.

The crowd included pupils from nearly all Catholic schools here and representatives of various religious orders who sat in groups under the bright May Day sun.

Car Token Theft Laid To Six Men

Transit Employes Arrested on Jobs; $10,000 Reported Taken in 2 Years

Six bonded employes of Capital Transit Co. yesterday were charged with the theft and re-sale of streetcar tokens.

Officials estimated the thefts over a two-year period would amount to at least $10,000.

A month's intensive investigation was concluded as the six worked their jobs early yesterday morning. The probe began when a sudden flood of tokens outstripped cash receipts on company ledgers.

Four Charged With Larceny

Four of the six, charged with grand larceny in theft of 9000 tokens and released on $500 bonds for court appearance May 20 were:

James H. Byerly, 34, of 1415 James Creek pkwy. nw., an employe for 15 years.

Lawrence W. Posey, 23, of 3301 Prospect ave. nw., 3½-year employe.

Thomas C. Hollowell, 69, of 3706 Cottage City, Md., a 20-year employe.

William A. Turner, 41, of 7728 Garrison rd., Lanham, Md., who has worked for Capital Transit eight years.

The other two, charged with receiving stolen property and released on $500 bonds, were:

Chester W. Little, 55, of 4341 Chesapeake st. nw., a five-year employe.

Alfred G. Pearce, 51, of 78 V st. nw., employed four years.

Company investigators, headed by Vice President J. E. Heberle, called in Metropolitan Police late Wednesday night after they felt they had uncovered the "manipulations" in records. The employes were arrested by Detectives F. R. Gaver and G. W. Chapman at car barns at Georgia ave. and V st. nw. and 14th and Decatur sts. nw.

The four men charged with grand larceny have been working as collectors who open the streetcar and bus cash boxes at the end of the day's runs.

Heberle said the procedure apparently had been for the collectors to take some of the day's receipts out of the boxes before putting the cash and tokens into pouches which were later sealed.

Little and Pearce, as depot clerks, were responsible for keeping the records of cash and tokens issued daily to car and bus operators and for checking receipts in the sealed pouches.

Heberle said the collectors are charged with turning the stolen tokens over to the two depot clerks for about $60 per thousand. The clerks, he said, would then post the 1000 tokens on the books at $83.33 per thousand and split the difference with collectors. The 1000 tokens thus purchased would balance with the cash receipts for that particular checking point that day, Heberle said.

Streetcar and bus operators are issued a certain amount of cash and tokens at the beginning of each day, but have no way to check the full day's receipts because the cash box is locked.

'Key' Testimony

FBI Backs Forgery Charges In May Case With Typewriter

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Pointing out clews on huge pictures of typewriting, FBI experts yesterday backed up the charge that invoices were forged to cover up bribes paid Andrew Jackson May.

Defense lawyers kept on with their battle to stop the trial of former Congressman May and the Garssons for bribery and conspiracy. After he turned down the fourth Garsson motion for a mistrial, Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut slapped a strict secrecy order on all such motions from now on.

Influence Plot Charged

May and the Garssons—Murray and Henry—and the Garsson Washington man, Joseph F. Freeman, all are accused in the District Court of conspiring for the sale of May's influence for some $50,000. May was chairman of the House Military Committee when he was helping the Garsson companies get their war orders, which came to more than 78 million dollars.

One Garsson venture was Cumberland Lumber Co.—which several witnesses have said May treated as his own. Prosecutor William A. Paisley told the jury this firm was set up as a means of paying the Congressman off. May handled its money, as it came from the Garssons, often putting Cumberland checks in his own bank account, and writing his personal checks to pay Cumberland's bills.

Cumberland "sold" $33,000 worth of lumber to other Garsson interests, and was paid for it. But Garsson officials have testified the lumber never was delivered. It was carried on the Garsson books as in storage at Whitesburg, Ky. But Kentucky timbermen testified there was no lumber stored in Whitesburg.

The $33,000 was paid on three invoices for lumber, dated October 11, October 23 and November 2, 1944. The invoices all are on the letterheads of the Cumberland Lumber Co., of Cumberland, Ky.

The trial moved into a detective story phase yesterday, as the prosecutors traced the story of the three documents.

First Ballot To Recommit Legislation Is Reversed

Move to Increase Many Ceilings by Ten Per Cent Is Rejected, 135 to 119

BULLETIN

The House last night, by a narrow 135 to 119 margin, defeated a proposed 10 per cent rent increase, and then voted 204 to 182 to extend rent controls at least to December 31.

By The Associated Press

The House voted tentatively, 156 to 147, last night to sweep rent control continuation legislation from the floor and send it back to the Banking Committee for further study.

The action was by a standing vote. It was subject to a roll call which began immediately.

Representative Patman (D., Tex.) made the motion to send the bill back to committee. He is a leader of a segment of the House which contends that the legislation so weakens rent control and controls over housing construction that they cannot be effectively enforced.

The House earlier rejected, 135 to 119, a proposal to raise rent ceilings of many tenants by 10 per cent and defeated three major moves to end all rent controls on June 30.

December 31 Tentative Life

It decided tentatively that rent controls should continue at least until December 31.

A vote of 129 to 84 wrote into the legislation a "home rule" amendment by Representative Redden (D., N. C.) that would permit any city, county or town to end rent control within its borders earlier than December 31 if it desired.

The House rejected 127 to 49 an amendment by Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.) to strike from the bill a provision allowing landlords and tenants to enter voluntary agreements to raise rents up to 15 per cent.

Representative Buck (R., N. Y.) told the House this "voluntary" arrangement would put the landlords "in the driver's seat," and would result in a 15 per cent "across the board" rent increase. Proponents argued that it would allow tenants to bargain for repairs and redecoration.

In the face of cries against continuation of Government "regimentation"—mixed with predictions that killing of rent control now would cause evictions and chaos in some areas—the House in rapid-fire order rejected these proposals:

1. By Representative Smith (R., Ohio), that Congress refuse to recognize an emergency in housing, and to strike from the bill language declaring such an emergency. This lost, 117 to 44, when Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), chairman of the Banking Committee, said it would make rent control unenforceable after June 30.

2. By Representative Worley (D., Tex.), a motion to kill rent control outright on June 30, when the present law expires. The vote was 133 to 60 against the proposal.

3. By Representative Rankin (D., Miss.), to strike out the enacting clause (to kill the whole bill.) This was defeated 153 to 56.

In addition to dealing with rents, the bill would abolish virtually all Government controls over building

Customs Chief To Step Down, Snyder Says

By The Associated Press

Customs Commissioner William R. Johnson, who was recently accused of trying to pressurize Congress to grant his bureau more funds, will step down from his position, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder announced yesterday.

Snyder said that Johnson will take a special assignment immediately as adviser to the American delegation at the trade conference now going on in Geneva, Switzerland, and give up the commissionership upon his return.

Snyder's statement stressed that Johnson had requested to be "relieved of his duties as Commissioner of Customs and reassigned in the customs service" upon his return from Geneva.

He also observed that the State Department had asked that Johnson be "made available" to serve "under the auspices of the State Department as a delegate" to the trade conference.

After the House voted a $3,500,000 cut for the Customs Bureau, Johnson ended the customs patrol along the Canadian border and laid off several hundred patrol officers in seaport cities.

A wave of protests poured in on Senate Appropriations Committeemen, and some Senators charged that Johnson had dropped employes in a "propaganda" move to pressurize Congress.

A short time later Johnson advised Senators that a resurvey had shown that funds were sufficient to permit the re-employment of 421 officers at seaports where there is "the greatest smuggling hazard."

Passing Freight's Shifting Load Causes Latest Pennsy Wreck

Huntington, Pa., May 1 (AP).—Two huge steel plates jutting from a freight train ripped like a giant canopener into a passing Pennsylvania railroad flyer early today, killing four passengers and injuring 40 others.

[Four Washington area residents received minor injuries in the crash.—Editor's note.]

A stream of sparks lit the darkness as the steel tore into the first coach of the 15-car New York to St. Louis passenger train—the American.

The crash at 1:47 a. m. (EST) jolted the steel onto another track and derailed a third train—a freight traveling in the opposite direction.

Dazed and bleeding passengers were hurled along the four-track mainline five miles west of here as the inch-thick steel plates cut through the side of the coach where many were sleeping.

Hours after the crash, Coroner Blair Shore said the death toll probably would rise, noting that "some of those taken to hospitals were badly mangled."

The railroad's casualty list included these dead:

Joseph Selnick, jr., 18, soldier, Pleasant Gap, Pa.

Sergt. Robert E. Deavers, age unavailable, Trinway, Ohio.

Herbert Bertram Heutsch, Columbia, Ill.

The fourth victim, a woman about 35, was believed to be the mother of an unidentified baby pulled from the wreckage with a broken leg. Wrapped in a towel, the four-month-old child was taken to a Huntingdon hospital.

Several of the injured admitted

6 Die in May Day Barrage in Gulch Near Palermo

Rome (Friday), May 2 (AP).—Six persons were killed and 15 wounded near Palermo, Sicily, yesterday in crossfire from machine guns in a mountain gulch overlooking the meeting place of two columns of parading workers celebrating May Day.

The workers were shot down at a cross roads in the village of Portella della Paglia Jato and Piana Degli Albanese. One of the dead was a woman.

Apparently the machine guns had been well set to command the cross roads.

Deficiency Bill Signed and Checks Go to Veterans

By The Associated Press

President Truman signed today a supplementary deficiency bill which includes $1,800,000,000 for the Veterans' Administration. The agency promptly announced that briefly delayed educational and subsistence checks to veterans will start going out today.

Also included in the $2,835,161,509 measure is 135 million dollars for the Social Security program of aid to the aged, children and blind. The Utah welfare commissioner had said that checks under this program had to await enactment of the measure.

The total is to round out funds for a score of agencies in the fiscal year ending June 30. It also includes six million dollars for the school lunch program and 300 million dollars for Army relief in occupied countries.

The Veterans' Administration said it had to withhold payments to a majority of 2,780,000 veterans because of a lack of funds.

Bill Would Modernize Reserve Officer Corps

Modernization of the Reserve Officers Training Corps is proposed in legislation introduced by Chairman Curtney (R., S. D.) of the Armed Services Committee. Provisions for air service training, and for advanced training in medical service and some specialized branches would be made under his proposal.

Gen. Vandenberg to New Post

Hillenkoetter Appointed Head Of Central Intelligence Group

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday named Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter head of the Central Intelligence Group, succeeding Lieut. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg.

Vandenberg will relieve Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker June 15 as chief of air staff and deputy commander of Army Air Forces, upon Eaker's retirement at his own request.

This shuffle precisely bore out speculation which has centered about the two important posts for a number of months.

Permanent Body Urged

Even while his relief, effective at once, was being announced at the White House, Vandenberg was urging before the House Executive Expenditures Committee approval of a bill establishing a permanent central intelligence agency. The present temporary agency was set up by executive order January 22, 1946.

After the committee meeting, which was closed, Vandenberg issued a statement terming the proposed legislation "a firm basis on which we can construct the finest intelligence service in the world." He said the United States was forced early in World War II to depend upon the British for intelligence of the enemy and added that this country "should never again have to go hat in hand, begging any foreign government for the eyes—the foreign intelligence— with which to see. We should be self-sufficient. The interests of others may not be our interests.

"In my opinion, a strong intelligence system is equally if not more essential in peace than in war. We must have this intelligence if we are to be forewarned against possible acts of aggression, and if we are to be armed against disaster in an era of atomic warfare."

"War Revealed Gaps"

Vandenberg recalled that before the recent war "it was felt there was something un-American about espionage and even about intelli-

Business Future of Capital Worries Trade Board Group

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Where does Washington go from here?

The city planning committee of the Board of Trade took a long look and raised a series of storm signals for local businessmen.

In a report issued yesterday, the committee said frankly it was worried about the business future of the Nation's Capital.

At the same time, the committee issued an estimate setting the population of the District of Columbia at 860,000 as of January 1, 1947.

The reasons for the furrowed brows were:

1. There is an unmistakable housing boom on in neighboring counties of Maryland and Virginia. More housing is scheduled for Prince Georges County, Md., alone than for all of the District.

2. Business, government and industry are decentralizing and moving across the District line.

The trend, too, is expected to gain impetus as building priorities are lifted.

What happens if the movements go unhalted?

The committee replies, "When the loss of values caused by decentralization is so great that the area vacated ceases to be economically self-supporting, it becomes an actual liability to the rest of the community—a blighted area."

The committee report, known as "Washington Trends: 1947," was prepared under the general supervision of Fischer S. Black, chairman, with the assistance of a research subcommittee. The subcommittee was headed by F. W. Wilcutt, chairman, and included G. R. Wilhelm and Miss Isabelle A. Smullen. The committe has been at work since last autumn.

The research group studied housing construction activity between

Auditorium May Be Required For Daylight Time Hearings

Time (daylight or standard?) hangs heavy over the District Commissioners.

Pledged to follow the dictates of the greater Washington area citizenry, they're wondering what the public sentiment really is. And they wonder, too, whether the District Building board room will accommodate all who wish to speak at their public hearing on Wednesday.

The Commissioners set the hearing date shortly after President Truman signed the local option bill on time standards for the District of Columbia. The bill provides that the Commissioners establish fast time for the District if the hearing develops that public sentiment is for it.

Commissioner John Russell Young, privately opposed to advancing the clocks, said last night that the Commissioners may consider rescheduling the hearing to the more commodious Interdepartmental Auditorium of the Labor Department.

The District Building board room, he pointed out, can accommodate only a few hundred persons, whereas the Labor auditorium can seat 1800.

Up to last night the Commissioners reported receipt of 233 individual requests for permission to speak on the daylight-standard debate. All who provided return addresses are being invited.

For the 131 individuals who seek to speak out in favor of fast time there are 102 willing to argue just as heatedly for continuance of Eastern Standard Time.

The petitioners for Daylight Time include three officers of citizens associations outside the District and 26 within; one executive of a civic association outside Washington and three in the District, and officers of 10 miscellaneous groups within Washington, including the Northeast Council

Four Area Residents Injured In Pennsylvania Rail Crash

Four metropolitan area residents, including one Washingtonian, were injured in the crash of the American Limited yesterday at Huntington, Pa.

Those hurt:

Michael M. Prencipe, 48, of 234 Randolph pl. ne., Washington; T/4 Oliver Kreider of Fort Myer, Va.; Mrs. Doreen Harlow of 39 Fort dr., Fairhaven, Va.; Joey E. Harlow, 3, of the Fort dr. address.

Prencipe, a plasterer and father of five, received lacerations of the left hand and a bruised arm, according to the Associated Press. His family said he was en route to Canonsburg, Pa., to visit for a few days with his brother.

They reported receipt of a wire shortly after 1 p. m., telling them he "arrived late but okay."

Kreider, who received head and face injuries in the crash, according to the Associated Press, was on his way to his home in Centerville, Ind., for a furlough, Fort Myer attaches said. He was assigned to the 9423d TSU, 17th Signal Corps, South Post, Fort Myer.

Mrs. Harlow, who reportedly received a bruised elbow and wrist cut, is the wife of Curtis Harlow, an Alexandria railroad employe. She and her infant son, who received facial cuts, were en route to her mother's home in Indiana for a visit.

to hospitals here and at Altoona 25 miles to the west were listed as critical and one was reported dying.

The railroad said in a statement it was not able to explain how the steel plates, one inch thick and 16 feet by 10½ feet, broke loose from their moorings aboard two low-sided flatcars.

As the "American" was passing the west-bound freight, the steel suddenly poked into the passenger engine, scraped two mail cars and a combination car and then bit into the coach.

Passengers were dumped into the aisles or dragged through the gaping hole in the side of the car.

"The steel cut through the coach like a knife," said John R. McCrory, New York film executive, who was a passenger.

McCrory said Mrs. Myrtes Carlo, New York registered nurse, was the heroine of the crash. With an unidentified doctor, Mrs. Carlo worked by lantern flares to aid the injured with bandages, the only material at hand. Mrs. Carlo, 24, was escorting the body of her mother home to Mount Pleasant, Tex., her husband, John, said.

Worked at Atomic Plant

Mother of a 7-month-old son, Jimmy, she had been in charge of first aid at an atomic plant at Richland, Wash., he said.

As the flyer and freight ground to a stop, the steel toppled to the other side, derailing the locomotive and tender of an east-bound freight. There were no casualties in this phase of the accident.

Other wrecks near here were those of the "Red Arrow" in which 24 were killed and 138 hurt February 18, and the "Sunshine Special," whose last Pullman broke loose and ran down a hill, killing a porter and injuring 11 passengers on February 28.

materials and construction under the Veterans Housing Act.

In presenting his proposal that the Government get out of the rent control business on June 30, Worley declared: "Let a man who owns a house have it back. That is the American way of life."

Leading the battle for continuation of rent controls, Wolcott said: "Thousands, untold thousands of evictions might occur. Do you want to take the responsibility for this? I hope the majority of my party will recognize its responsibility."

Representative Jensen (R., Iowa) told the House: "I promised my people to give America back to the people. Until we take the shackles off the building industry we never will get production of homes."

Replying, Representative Keating (R., N. Y.) declared: "I never told the people in my campaign that I would remove any controls that would create chaotic conditions in this country."

The measure would exempt from rent control new houses and dwellings that have not been rented in the last two years. Representative Monroney (D., Okla.) sought by amendment to eliminate this exemption, but failed.

Peron Announces Plan to Revamp Argentine Army

Buenos Aires, May 1 (AP).—President Juan Peron told congress he intended to modernize the Argentine army because our pacifist tradition of respect for all peoples is not sufficient, and a minimum of foresight is necessary in the midst of an armed world."

He did not specify the means of modernization. Members of his government, however, have indorsed President Truman's Pan-American defense plan for uniform training, apparently in the belief that the United States shortly would abandon its prohibition on the sale of arms to Argentina.

He called also for industrialization of Argentina, building up iron, steel, chemical and machines and "perhaps eventually certain armaments and materials of war."

Morrison Warns Labor Of Wildcat Strike Ills

London, May 1 (U.P.).—Herbert Morrison, majority leader in the House of Commons and chief economic planner for the government, warned labor tonight that persistent wildcat strikes were damaging both the national economy and the unions themselves.

Morrison spoke a few hours after 10,000 London dock workers, at a riotous meeting, voted to return to work tomorrow after a four-day wildcat strike in sympathy with 3000 striking Glasgow dockmen. The Glasgow men, however, voted to continue their five-weeks strike which was called because the Lbaor Ministry ordered the layoff of 500 workers who were said to be no longer needed.

Party's Prospects Bright in West, Truman Is Told

By The Associated Press

President Truman heard yesterday from his party's leaders in Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas that prospects for Democratic success in 1948 are bright.

Harold Barker, Minnesota Democratic State chairman, told reporters after the group's White House visit that he told the President that Senator Ball and Governor Youngdahl, Minnesota Republicans, are "the two best assets we have in our effort to win in 1948."

Robert Tehan, Wisconsin national committeeman, said he told Mr. Truman the recent special election in the State's Second Congressional District in which a Republican narrowly won, "indicated that the old Progressive Party followers were now backing the Democrats."

Mrs. Daphna Nygaard, North Dakota national committeewoman, said farmers in that State are prosperous and "cognizant" of the part the Democratic administration had played in this situation.

Eugene C. Mahoney, South Dakota national committeeman, said Democrats are making gains in that usually Republican State.

Search Is Pressed For Missing Airliner

Vancouver, B. C., May 1 (AP).—Search party landed today in the area where a Trans-Canada Airlines plane disappeared Tuesday, and prepared to hack its way through the brush of a mountainside in hope of rescuing at least some of the 15 persons aboard.

The search was spurred by persistent reports from various sources that lights had been seen in the mountains of the Indian Arm District, 10 miles north of here. The air search was hampered, however, by a drizzling rain.

20,000 Watch Apple Queen's Coronation

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Winchester, Va., May 1.—You couldn't have asked for a better day for the coronation of Queen Shenandoah.

Nor for a more vivacious queen than pert Jean Cartwright Lane, daughter of Gov. William Preston Lane of Maryland, on whose pretty brunette head the official tiara was placed this afternoon by Virginia's Gov. William M. Tuck.

Prior to the coronation, and to the pageantry which was the highlight of today's twentieth observance of the annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, the Governor of Virginia and the Governor of Maryland got together for an informal chat at a stag luncheon at the Winchester Golf and Country Club.

Apples Replace Oysters

But so far as any one could judge, the two Governors talked of nothing more serious than apples, and the oyster controversy was not mentioned.

Controversy, generally, was rather an alien subject in this Virginia town today. The townspeople and the thousands who poured in to enjoy the apple festival were in carnival mood. Many business houses enjoyed a half holiday in honor of the occasion, and two streets were roped off for what amounted to a county fair.

The fair consisted, among other things of the usual cotton candy, monkeys on feathery sticks. Even the traditional kewpie dolls. The inevitable card shark barker, and the perpetual hot-dogs.

Center Of Attraction

But while the carnival drew big crowds this morning, it was the Coronation of the Queen and the Pageant, "Forerunners—a Pageant of Spring" which was the center of today's attraction. Approximately 20,000 persons attended the Coronation and gay pageant which followed it, but few of those heard what the Governor of Virginia actually said to the Governor of Maryland, shortly after the former had crowned the later's daughter Queen Shenandoah.

Governor Tuck had escorted Jean Cartwright Lane, clad in rich satin robes, down the Coronation Path to the Throne from which she was to watch the Pageant. He was followed by a horde of photographers, who first snapped Miss Lane, then Miss Lane with her court and crowner, then Miss Lane being solidly kissed by first her father, then General Jacob L. Devers.

Here's What He Said

Said the Governor of Virginia to the Governor of Maryland: "When does my turn come?"

He got his kiss.

Governor Tuck also varied from the accepted routine in his Coronation of Miss Lane. Instead of using the regulation statement that he was crowning her "In token of our faith in you," he said, "because of your beauty and fine qualities."

Altogether it was a very successful day for the town of Winchester, which watched the thousands of people who came to share with it the commemoration of the fertility of the Shenandoah Valley.

Field Day for Vendors

It was a field day for the men who sold balloons and other festival favors to the waiting crowd, and a proud day for the more than a thousand Handley School students who participated in the pageant.

The pageant opened with a group of girls in white robes and boys in red robes, with tassels on their mortar-boarded heads. The girlish voices were joined by the deeper tones of the boys in singing "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." The pageant traced through the highlights of American history from the time Indians were the only Americans until the present, when America stands among other United Nations:

"And the peaceful shall slumber lapped in universal law; and the war drums throb no longer, and the battle flags are furled.

"In the parliament of man, the Federation of the World."

Would Join Press

Queen Shenandoah XX, who had confided to a member of the press that what she wanted to be was a member of the press, had a ready smile for the photographers who crowded around her both at today's coronation and early this morning, when the Queen with her court went for a tour of an apple orchard near the Handley High School.

That tour almost ended in chaos when motion picture photographer and still photographers gave varying instructions simultaneously to an amused Queen and court, while the Queen's chaperones piped: "These girls have to be back at the hotel at 10:30 and its 10:30 now."

All in all, though, every one seemed to have fun. That fun was continued tonight, when the Winchester and visting firemen's torchlight and Mummers' parade wound through Winchester streets to a cacophony of sound, and brilliant fireworks lit the evening sky above Handley High School.

Tomorrow the festival celebration will be brought to a close with a repeat performance of the pageant, and grand parade in the afternoon, and the Queen's Ball at night.

Wind and Rainstorm Spreads Damage Over Frederick and Washington Counties

Emmitsburg, Md., May 1 (AP).—Residents of upper Frederick and Washington Counties counted property damage in the thousands today after a violent wind storm unroofed buildings, blew down barns, and toppled trees during a heavy rain Wednesday night.

The greatest damage was concentrated here, but the destruction covered a wide belt along the Pennsylvania line from Emmitsburg to Waynesboro, some 15 miles west.

No one was hurt seriously. Falling debris bumped Lamarr Ridenour on the head when the wind blew down a barn on his father's farm near Leitersburg, in northeast Washington County.

Four persons were only slightly injured when a car skidded on the wet pavement and overturned in a field along Highway 340 near Red Hill, in Frederick County.

The force of the wind was demonstrated on Wilbur Lohman's farm near Hagerstown. A piece of sheet iron from the roof of a small building was driven six inches deep into a nearby tree.

All through the area, roof sections were twisted around trees like pieces of adhesive tape.

Although it may not have met the technical qualifications to be tabbed a tornado, many observers said the storm had about as much force as a twister.

Damage in Emmitsburg was estimated unofficially at $25,000.

The storm hit about 6:15 and blew furiously for about 15 minutes. Telephone and power service went out almost immediately, and the latter was not restored until after midnight.

The roof of the Elmer Zimmerman building went swirling 100 feet across the public square and landed on Edward Houck's house. Wreckage from Houck's house and the nearby home of Charles Horner buried two cars. The roof was lifted off a factory which Maurice Keilholtz is converting into apartments. He estimated damage at $10,000.

Mayors' School Plea

Annapolis, Md., May 1 (AP).—The Mayors of Annapolis and Crisfield have laid before Governor Lane a plea that new revenues in prospect for their counties not be restricted to use of schools.

Mayor William U. McCready of Annapolis and Mayor N. R. Colbourn of Crisfield took their arguments to the Governor yesterday.

The recent General Assembly enacted recommendations of the so-called Sherbow Commission providing that some fees and taxes collected in Maryland should be retained in the counties and communities where they are paid. Local bills introduced by the Anne Arundel and Somerset County delegations specified that in these two counties all such funds should be retained by the county commissioners for school purposes.

Mayors McCready and Colbourn asked Governor Lane to veto the measures.

Naval Reserve Week

Annapolis, Md., May 1 (AP).—Governor Lane today proclaimed May 18-25 as Naval Reserve Week, declaring that a "strong peacetime naval reserve is vital if the United States is to keep its world peace pledge. ..." He urged that Sunday, May 25, be recognized and observed as "Naval Reserve Day."

Forest Fire Loss Cut

Annapolis, Md., May 1 (AP).—Acting State Forester H. C. Buckingham said today the State forest fire loss during April was approximately a quarter of that during the same month last year and gave a good deal of credit for cutting the loss to Army flyers.

"The Army flyers did a wonderful job in buzzing our fires and dropping messages to our men on the fire line to tell them how the battle was progressing," he said.

Firemen Buy Building

Westernport, Md., May 1 (AP).—A volunter fire company is insuring its being on hand in the event another fire breaks out in a building severely damaged by a blaze several weeks ago.

The Potomac Fire Company No. 2 has bought the damaged building, the former American Legion Post home, for a club-house.

School Heads Meet

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—Approximately 300 school superintendents, high school principals and officials of the State Department of Education gathered today for a panel discussion opening the fourth annual States-wide conference for high school principals.

Dr. Earle T. Hawkins, State director of instruction, led the seven-member forum, based on the theme that secondary high schools should provide "normal progress" for all youths, despite their level of academic accomplishment.

Besides the three "R's," high schools should gear their programs to fit community needs, to teach leadership, the arts of living, and some training in vocational fitness, Hawkins said.

Compensation Frauds

Hagerstown, Md., May 1 (AP).—D. Lee Staley, manager of the Hagerstown office of the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board, said today he plans to take court action against at least six men he accuses of receiving unemployment compensation or veterans' adjustment payments for periods of up to 13 weeks while they were gainfully employed.

Martinelli Sentenced

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—Louis Martinelli, accused of perjury when he failed to come through as the State's star witness against three men convicted of setting a rooming house fire, pleaded guilty to a lesser charge today and was sentenced to eight months in prison.

Judge Abner Sayler pronounced sentence on a "misprision of felony charge" which specified that Martinelli kept silent and failed to testify although he knew the accused arsonists were guilty.

The 26-year-old former professional wrestler and veteran of wartime service in the Navy had been scheduled to testify against Marty Vicks, Kennon W. Langham and Walter Haas, all convicted of murder and arson in connection with the waterfront fire last October 31.

Coon Hunters Trial

Westminster, Md., May 1 (AP).—The United Coon Hunters Association of Carroll County will stage its annual field trial at Houcksville Saturday. A $500 purse will be presented to the winner.

Turkey Plans Mapped

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—To meet the problem of keeping wild turkeys wild, Maryland game officials plan to adopt a system perfected in Virginia for breeding them in the mountain woodlnads.

"We have tried trapping wild turkey toms and wing-clipping them to breed with hens at the turkey farm in Washington County, but that is slow progress," State Game Warden Earnest A. Vaughan reported today.

Maryland already has tried placing wing-clipped hens in enclosures throughout the mountains.

"This worked to some extent," said Vaughan. "But we found the toms were hesitant about flying over the fence and the loss from predators was too great."

So he went into a huddle with I. C. Quinn, director of Virginia's State Game and Inland Fisheries Department.

He learned Virginia has a roosting enclosure inside each of its mountainside brood pens. This protects the hens from nighttime raids by woodland prowlers.

Crab Season Opens

Annapolis, Md., May 1 (AP).—The crab season opened today throughout Maryland waters, with prospects for the year in doubt until reports come from fishermen and packers.

The State Department of Tidewater Fisheries said it had no means of surveying the expected take for the season, but if this year's catch comes near last year's it will be a good season.

Packers and fishermen all over the State reported last year's crabs were plentiful and of excellent quality.

A new problem entering the crabbing picture this year is the extension of the use of crab pots.

The crab pot is a wire box two feet square with a funnel opening. It is usually baited with menhaden. The use of pots is licensed by the State, with a $10 fee for any number up to 35 pots.

Key Flag to Be Lighted

Frederick, Md., May 1.—The American flag that flies over the grave of Francis Scott Key in Mount Olivet Cemetery here 24 hours a day will be illuminated again within the near future, the Chamber of Commerce voted yesterday. Nightly lighting of the flag over the burying place of the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner" was discontinued shortly after the United States entered World War II.

Tuberculosis Treatment

Richmond, Va., May 1 (AP).—Dr. H. McCleod Riggens, of New York, president of the American Trudeau Society, said today that research by the society on 200 patients was disclosed that while streptomycin is not a cure for tuberculosis it has a broader field of usefulness in treatment of the disease than was believed originally.

Producers of the drug have given $1,080,000 worth of streptomycin to the society for research purposes, Riggins said in an address at the annual meeting of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association here today.

The society's research staff now is engaged in determining the accurate doze of the drug, how long it should be used and the type of patients it should be used for, Riggins said. He added that the drug has certain disadvantages and should not be used in all cases.

Dr. Francis J. Weber, chief of tuberculosis control, U. S. Public Health Service, discussed tuberculosis control.

In a business session the association elected Henry R. Miller, jr., of Richmond, president; Dr. C Lydon Harrell, Norfolk, first vice president; Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria, second vice president; William T. Luck, Richmond, secretary, and George W. Call, Richmond, treasurer.

Government Criticized

Richmond, Va., May 1 (AP).—The Virginia State Restaurant Association has written President Truman indorsing "wholeheartedly" his plea for a reduction in living costs and at the same time registering an official protest against Government practices which it considers make such reduction impossible.

The association, representing some 5000 restaurant operators in the State, listed these practices as payment by the Government for nonproduction of food products, continued purchasing by Government agencies of food products for maintenance of food price levels, reduction of the purchasing power of the dollar by advocacy of increased wages, and withholding food products and commodities which would provide a surplus to combat high prices.

Copies of the letter were also forwarded to Senators Harry Flood Byrd and A. Willis Robertson, as well as to all Virginia legislators.

Virginia News

Dr. Pettis, Western Hospital Head, Denies Patient Died as a Result of Being Beaten

Staunton, Va., May 1 (AP).—Dr. J. B. Pettis, superintendent of Western State Hospital, has denied that Benjamin Franklin Grimes, 72-year-old Fredericksburg patient, died April 24 as the result of being "brutally beaten."

A Richmond attorney, Howard H. Carwile, yesterday telegraphed Governor Tuck asking for an investigation of Grimes' death, stating that he had received information "from the inside" of the hospital that "two nights after (Daniel) Struder's death . . . Grimes . . . was brutally beaten and died."

The telegram said that Carwile had heard the body of the second patient "was quietly disposed of and that the attendant has been placed in jail . . . The conditions in our mental hospitals grow more cadaverous every day. An open, impartial investigation is imperative."

The hospital superintendent declared that Grimes' death occurred five days after Struder's. Grimes was in the same ward with Struder and since "it was suspected that he might have been mistreated" an examination was made. Some outward marks were found, but officials were unable to determine whether they were "due to abuse," he said.

Grimes "died a natural death" and "any treatment he may have received definitely had no connection with his death," Dr. Pettis reported.

The superintendent said that if any abuse of the Fredericksburg man had taken place it was by the same attendant who allegedly abused Struder and who was dismissed. The attendant was not jailed because Commonwealth's Attorney Fitzhugh Elder, jr., advised Dr. Pettis there was not enough evidence of mistreatment in the death of Struder.

"This was all taken up with the commissioner in his investigation" and it was "determined that Grimes was not involved," Dr. Pettis added. He had been in a dying condition when put in the ward and had daily doctor's visits, the hospital head said.

Carwile had called on the Governor for an investigation of Struder earlier in the month and a subsequent "personal investigation" by Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, State Commissioner of Mental Hygiene, was made. Dr. Barrett informed the Governor that there was evidence of "some abuse," but mistreatment did not contribute to Struder's death. The attendant who admitted he struck Struder was discharged immediately.

The VA yesterday announced temporary depletion of funds as causing delay in the distribution of subsistence checks to veterans pending congressional action to provide funds.

Embezzler Sentenced

Norfolk, Va., May 1 (AP).—Harry M. Harrington, 42, head teller at the National Bank of Commerce, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Sterling Hutcheson in United States District Court to 18 months in a Federal reformatory for embezzlement of $16,000 from the bank.

Harrington appeared before the court on a criminal information and waived formal indictment. He pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement. Charges of misapplication of funds and abstraction of funds were dismissed.

Tuck Invites Architects

Richmond, Va., May 1 (AP).—Governor Tuck today told the Virginia chapter of the American Institute of Architecture, which termed his statement of policy on State capital outlay projects as "highly confusing" and a position which failed to include the viewpoint of the architect, that he would be glad to sit down with its officers and talk about the matter.

The Governor contradicted the architects on the matter of disregarding their opinions, however.

mid-November, 1946, and mid-January, 1947, and found the following:

Of a total of 245 million dollars worth of building planned or under way, 23.5 per cent was in Prince Georges County, 23 per cent in the District, 21 per cent in Fairfax County, Va., 17 in Montgomery County, Md., and 15.15 in Arlington County and Alexandria, Va.

The figures from the period indicate that while 5000 family units were planned for the District, 25,000 were scheduled for the metropolitan area outside the District.

The committee noted frankly that "many people have moved from the District to outlying areas, mainly because more houses are being built there."

And as the homes go up, "the residential sections in the suburbs will come to depend more and more on their local shopping centers and subcenters."

D. C. Competes With Suburbs

Washington businessmen are "in direct competition with the outlying areas of Maryland and Virginia" rather than in competition with fellow Washingtonian merchants, the committee said.

And local business has several counts against it on this score. "It is universally recognized that traffic congestion and the lack of off-street parking facilities are major problems in central business districts. Washington is no exception in this respect," the report noted.

The trend of businesses away from Washington's central district is "becoming evident," the committee said, warning that "once an establishment leaves the central business district for the suburban area of Maryland or Virginia it is lost to the tax base.

"This will eventually place a heavier burden on the remaining establishments resulting in an acceleration toward areas where the burden is less," the report said.

How important this is in Washington is indicated by the committee notation that the area bounded by N st., 19th st., Pennsylvania ave. and 3d st. nw., containing only 1.7 per cent of the taxable property of the District, pays 23 per cent of the real estate tax.

Evidence of decentralization, which was said to have begun slowly in the early 1930s, was contained in the moves by governmental units—Washington's chief industry.

The report noted the location of units at Suitland, Md., and the Pentagon, the Navy Annex, the Naval Hospital, Public Roads Administration, National Institute of Health and the Naval Ordnance Laboratory.

Part of National Movement

The trend toward decentralization here is part of a national movement, the report said. The researchers said Milwaukee assessed values declined 38.8 per cent from 1930 to 1946. In Louisville, the drop was 29.2 per cent from 1930 to 1945, while in Philadelphia the central area total dropped from 924 million dollars in 1930 to 451 million dollars in 1946.

The new Board of Trade president, John A. Reilly, last week pledged the board would place major emphasis "on the threat of business decentralization in the downtown area." He said the board would investigate projects to relieve traffic congestion and provide adequate parking space.

But Not a Ghost Town

Washington and Washingtonians are leaving town, the report shows, recommending as a cure for the trend:

1. Redevelopment of residential areas adjacent to the business district to attract higher income inhabitants.

2. Group efforts by merchants to bring business into town by competing with the neighboring areas across the District line.

3. Improvement of parking and traffic conditions.

Washington—ghost town?

Well, not exactly. The committee estimated the population of the District at 860,000 as of January 1, 1947. As for future population, it is bound to increase, if there are no national emergencies, but the District's share of the metropolitan population will "constantly decrease."

The committee estimated Arlington County population at 120,000; Fairfax County, 70,000; Alexandria, 60,000; Montgomery County, 120,000; and Prince Georges County, 130,000.

It forecast that Arlington's population would rise to 330,000 and Alexandria's to 120,000 by 1970, but said these areas, along with the District, are "two thirds saturated now" and their rate of growth will be slower compared to Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

Prosecutor Bernard J. Vincent that he was secretary of Erie Basin Metals Co.—one of the chain of Garsson companies. Stone said he had also been connected with Illinois Watch Case Co., in which the Garssons had an interest, and with Excel Movie Products Co. Stone had brought a typewriter to court with him. His company rented it from International Typewriter Exchange.

Mrs. Marie Hughes, who has worked for the Exchange 26 years, was the next witness. She had with her the papers that make up practically the whole life history of Stone's typewriter—which is named Underwood 3780141-5.

Erie Paid Rental

Mrs. Hughes said Miss L. D. Sternberg of the watch case company ordered a typewriter from her office in October, 1944, and that Underwood 3780141-5 was delivered on October 24, 1944. Erie Basin shared offices with the watch case firm, and several months later paid the rental on the typewriter.

Later on, the typewriter passed on to the movie products company, from which it was brought to court yesterday.

FBI Agent Edward L. Olsen then told how he went to the movie products office and typed off these pages on Underwood 3789141-5. FBI Agent John J. Walsh said he got some more samples, from machine in another Garsson office, Batavia Metals. This machine was a Royal, which was not in court yesterday.

Sent to FBI Laboratory

Both agents said they sent their samples to the FBI laboratory in Washington.

Dr. Fred M. Miller said he took charge of the samples here. He said he was a bachelor and master of arts and a doctor of philosophy—having gotten all his degrees in chemistry at Indiana University before he became an FBI agent. After he came to the bureau, Dr. Miller went to school again and became an expert on questioned documents.

As Dr. Miller finished this testimony, Justice Schweinhaut ruled he was an expert, and so can give the jury his opinion about documents. Defense Counsel Charles J. Margiotti cheerfully announced that he was willing to admit Dr. Miller was an expert. This led Prosecutor Paisley to growl that it was a fine time for the defense to make the admission.

Dr. Miller hung up half a dozen big photos of the Cumberland invoices and the samples taken by Agent Olsen, and began pointing out on the 2-inch letters the clews to the typewriter that wrote both sets of papers.

Letter Peculiarities

For instance, the A's have no tails in either the invoices or the Olsen samples. The T's all are lazy and lean toward the letters next to them. The W's are heaviest at the bottom.

As Dr. Miller pointed out these clews, the jurors leaned forward to follow. Justice Schweinhaut left the bench and stood by the charts for a while to watch.

Upon these clews and more testimony Dr. Miller is due to give today, the prosecutors base their charge that the invoices were typed right in the Erie Basin office. Harry Glick, the Erie Basin accountant, has said that is where he got them, from Dr. Henry M. Garsson, with orders to pay them. It was noted that the typewriter was not delivered to the Garsson office until after the date that appears on two of the invoices.

gence generally, but said the war had revealed "immense gaps in our knowledge."

He emphasized that the proposed Central Intelligence group would not duplicate or interfere with the work of any other department. The bill contains, he pointed out, a prohibition against the exercise of police powers and internal security functions by the bureau which would assure that it "can never become a Gestapo or security police."

At the White House, Press Secretary Charles Ross said Vandenberg had been released at the urgent request of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Admiral Hillenkoetter, who was intelligence officer on the staff of Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz during the war, recently returned from Paris to take over his new job. He is a native of St. Louis and a graduate of the Naval Academy.

His experience includes service as naval attache and assistant naval attache at Paris, Madrid and Lisbon. Last year he commanded the battleship Missouri when it conveyed the body of the Turkish Ambassador to Istanbul and later made calls at ports in Greece, Italy and North Africa.

His Navy career has included service on submarines and destroyers and at various shore stations. Wounded at Pearl Harbor while executive officer of the battleship West Virginia, he was transferred as executive officer to the battleship Maryland, with which he saw action in the Pacific. He was in charge of intelligence on Nimitz's staff from September, 1942, to March, 1943.

Vandenberg, a nephew of Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), became director of the Central Intelligence Group after serving as head of the intelligence section of the War Department General Staff. He succeeded Rear Admiral Sidney W. Souers, who inaugurated the office.

Laraine Sheds Tears Again At Hearing

Los Angeles, May 1 (AP).—Laraine Day burst into tears again today in the midst of arguments over her divorce.

She had listened to Attorney Maurice Rose charge, of her subsequent marriage to Leo Durocher: "This illegal marriage if consummated by cohabitation in this State would have constituted bigamy in this State.

"She knows the Mexican proceedings were no good; she knows the El Paso marriage was no good."

He was halted by frantic but unsuccessful objections from Miss Day's attorney, Isaac Pacht. Rose was referring to a second divorce which she obtained from J. Ray Hendricks in Mexico, and her marriage to Durocher in Texas.

"She meant to cohabit with Durocher here," Rose continued, "until told she might be prosecuted for bigamy. So what did she do?

"She went to Havana and New York with him. It was her love life against the law. She loves this man. He's her ideal!"

She testified yesterday, at the hearing on a show cause order which would dissolve her divorce from Hendricks here, that the suspending manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers was her ideal.

RAF Plane Lowers Record

Capetown, South Africa, May 1 (U.P.).—An RAF Mosquito bomber today hung up a new speed record between London and Capetown by spanning the 7500 miles in 21 hours 29 minutes. Ex-Cultural Officer At Moscow Returns

New York, May 1 (AP).—Armond Dare Willis, former cultural officer attached to the U. S. Embassy at Moscow, arrived by plane from Paris today but declined to discuss with reporters his recent difficulties with the State Department.

"I am under orders to keep my mouth shut," said the 41-year-old Willis who declared in Berlin last month that he had resigned his embassy post because other staff members "are building their reputations and their careers on being Russian haters." He was accompanied by his wife and two children.

The Federal Diary

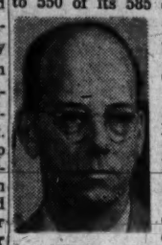
CPA Soon to Become Just a War Memory

CPA: It won't be long until this war agency is a mere memory. Today dismissal notices will be given to 550 of its 585 employes. And all of those 550 are in this city. In the past couple of months about 1800 Civilian Production employes have been axed.



Kluttz

The sweeping layoff was ordered by the Commerce Department, which will take over CPA on Monday. Only 35 people in its rubber division will be retained. The department explains that basic legislation exists to control only rubber after July 1. However, if legislation now pending is approved to continue control of cordage, quinine, and other short products, the notices of people in this work will be withdrawn.

The department pointed out that the decision to lay off was made now to give the employes the maximum available notice. The minimum notice is 30 days; the maximum about 56 days.

And, by the way, all this should be a warning to OPA, which Commerce will take over on June 5. The department is at work on a plan that would skeletonize the price agency in a big way. It would force OPA to lay off several thousand additional people before it takes over. Meantime, OPA is trying to figure out how many employes are to be transferred, and where. And there's a bitter battle and all sorts of charges and countercharges of favoritism, discrimination, etc.

CAPITOL HILL: That State, Justice, and Commerce appropriation bill won't be reported to the House today as had been planned . . . maybe Monday, and maybe later . . . The House Rules Committee yesterday okayed the rider to slow down promotions in the Federal agencies. This means the rider, which is legislation on an appropriation bill, will not be subject to a point of order . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday formally reported out the Langer-Chavez retirement bill which was explained here in detail last Sunday. The report also was okayed. You may get copies of both the bill and the report from the committee.

WAR: The House Civil Service Committee, too, is investigating War's personnel policies. Harold Hanes, a lawyer here, has been added to the committee staff for the job.

SUITLAND: The 250 Government girls in dormitories here were told yesterday that they must vacate by July 1. Uncle Sam wants them to move into Arlington Farms. Since 86 per cent of the girls work in Federal agencies at Suitland, they're protesting and threatening a sitdown strike against the movers.

PEOPLE: William P. Glendening yesterday was appointed assistant secretary and budget officer of Federal Trade . . . Albert Carretta is leaving Navy to practice law here. He also served on the SEC legal staff.

UPWA: This left-wing CIO union is going all out in an attempt to defeat the President's Federal employe loyalty program. A march on Washington, picketing, and mass demonstrations to protest the program are under discussion. Members are urged to donate a day's pay to fight the order. Also, members are asked to send a wire to the President urging him to withdraw the order. The wires are all written out and all people are asked to do is to sign their names and pay 50 cents each for the privilege.

COMMERCE: After a long fight and a series of bungles, 150 employes in the Office of International Trade have been ordered to refund in-grade promotions they are legally entitled to as of last November. The Comptroller General ordered the promotions canceled since they were not based on efficiency ratings as is the law. Commerce appealed, but the Comptroller stuck to the law. Now there are several red faces in Commerce.

FBI: It will start moving Saturday morning from the National Guard Armory to the old OPA building.

Lord Shepherd Sees Land Nationalization

Northampton, Eng., May 1 (U.P.).—Lord Shepherd, national agent for the Labor Party until raised to the peerage in 1946, told a May Day rally tonight the land eventually would be nationalized.

Although the time had not yet come for land nationalization, he said, "We can control the production that comes from it." When the time came to nationalize land, it could be taken by taxation or by purchase over a period of years "if it has to be bought," he said.

Soviet Plan Rejected

Tehran, Iran, May 1 (U.P.).—Official sources said today that the Iranian government had rejected a new Soviet proposal for the formation of a joint Iran-Soviet airways corporation. Russia had proposed the formation of a company to fly northern Iran. Each nation would have shared 50-50 in the venture.

Madagascar Rebels Attack Postoffice

Time Enough

The totally disproportionate attention that the House and Senate have given to the minor issue of daylight saving time for the District of Columbia verges on the ludicrous. Congress took time out from issues of world importance to listen to every inane argument that could be conjured up about a strictly local affair. We hope, however, that the District Commissioners will profit from the wordage. There is nothing more to be said on daylight saving that has not been said. There is utterly no reason for the Commissioners to go over the same ground again at length. The hearings should be short and concise, with a prompt decision to enable Washington to have the benefits of what other cities are already enjoying.

We still cannot see the necessity for delaying the hearings until May 7 as Commissioner John R. Young has decreed. It should have been possible to initiate the change this weekend. For no one needs time to prepare a case, and the hearings will be only a formal rehash. A majority of Washingtonians, as sampled scientifically by The Post Poll, favor daylight saving here, and suburban areas of both Maryland and Virginia have been given authority to follow the District's lead. Since the delay now appears inevitable, the Commissioners owe it to the public to stick to the goal of a one-day session and to reach a conclusion so that the clock may be moved ahead by May 11. Prolongation of the farcical condition in which everyone is out of step but Washington is no benefit to anybody.

School Aid

The United States is facing a crisis in education which threatens an imminent breakdown of its public school system. Most of the measures designed to meet this crisis through a program of Federal financial aid, now under consideration by the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare and by the House Committee on Education and Labor, are mere palliatives. The bill currently accorded most prominence and most likely to receive serious congressional consideration is the one bearing the name of the chairman of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, Senator Taft, although it was sponsored equally by Senators Thomas of Utah, Ellender, Hill, Smith, Cooper, Chavez and Tobey. It would provide, on the basis of a complex allocation formula determined by the needs and the educational expenditures of the States, Federal funds amounting in the first year of operation to 150 million dollars, in the second year to 200 millions and 250 million dollars annually thereafter. These funds would be used to defray current school expenses of the States, mainly teachers' salaries. Inadequate though it seems, the Taft bill merits support. We hope it will be speedily enacted.

It is somewhat ironic that the measure should bear Mr. Taft's name. We cannot refrain from recalling that it was Mr. Taft who four years ago deliberately engineered the sabotage of a similar, and more generous, measure for Federal aid to the schools sponsored by Senators Thomas and Hill who have joined him in sponsorship of the pending bill. The crisis was real enough in 1943; it might have been greatly relieved had Congress acted effectively at that time. At any rate, great credit is due Messrs. Hill and Thomas, we think, for their patient, tireless efforts to arouse the Senate to the urgent need for Federal action.

This need derives from the patent inability of a number of States to provide their children with educational opportunities of minimum decency. The justification for Federal action lies in the obvious impact of local maleducation upon the Nation as a whole. The people of Washington do not have to seek far for an illustration of the extensiveness of the impact. It was but recently that we were relieved of a "mayor" elected to rule us by the people of Mississippi as a result of the ignorance imposed on that State by poverty. In a society such as ours, founded on the principle of government by the people, education is an indispensable foundation. Wherever it is lacking, the welfare of the whole society is threatened.

It is, of course, a sound American doctrine that education should be kept under State control. The Taft bill contains explicit prohibition of any Federal control or influence over a State's administration of its public school system. It seems to us that this prohibition provides ample answer to those who oppose the bill as violative of States' rights. It is a bill designed to help the States in meeting a problem of national concern; primary responsibility remains in State hands. The problem is so urgent and so vital to preservation of the Union that Federal-State cooperation to meet it is imperative.

Arab Case

The Arab case for the consideration of Palestine independence by the special session of the United Nations Assembly was foredoomed to failure. It was marked by a lack of realism. Few of the representatives of the 55 nations at this special session are ready for a full-dress debate. They do not have the time to spare for a meeting that in the nature of things would be protracted. They lacked the documentary equipment necessary to come to an intelligent conclusion. To be sure, the issue has been explored by countless commissions, but, since the United Nations has been invited to find a solution, it must of necessity obtain material and recommendations from a committee of its own. Nor could the United Nations itself afford the expense that would be entailed by endless discussion. The Arab request, moreover, flew in the face of all parliamentary experience. Order, let alone wisdom, dictates the presentation to the regular Assembly of a report of findings, as is done prior to action by national assemblies. This is the procedure that has now been decided upon in the dispute over Palestine.

This does not mean that a fresh exploration into Palestinian fact-finding is at all a happy idea. It is likely, indeed, to yield nothing but a compounding of the existing confusion. For few combinations of U. N. members can be imagined that would have an unprejudiced view of the situation in Palestine. An example of what we may expect is to be found in the United Nations Balkan Committee which is now in Geneva wrestling with the issue of the border threat to Greek independence. If the members are able to write a report at all, it looks as if it will be a divided one. The same prospect must be envisaged as the outcome of any United Nations committee that is given the task of reporting on Palestine. Properly to grapple with the Palestine nettle the U. N. should have been presented by the British government with a workable plan. Time, with its deepening of discords, has, of course, worked against the enforcement of any plan, but a British plan would have had considerable weight behind it if U. N. approval had been sought and obtained.

In British minds the Palestine issue has always been regarded as one and indivisible. Actually the issue has two parts: first, Jewish immigration and, secondly, the future status of Palestine. This was the approach of the Anglo-American Commission of Inquiry that was set up 18 months ago at the suggestion of Mr. Bevin. The immediate entry of 100,000 homeless Jews was the unanimous recommendation of the British and American members. This would have been nothing more than reparation for the white paper violation of the League of Nations mandate under which the British are operating in Palestine. The British White Paper of 1939 severely restricted Jewish immigration. When it was submitted to the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, four members branded the restriction as illegal, and two of the remaining three (the third being a Briton) simply said that the question could not be answered by a plain "yes" or "no." In Britain the Labor Party was of one mind in dubbing the White Paper policy a betrayal of the mandate. In a recent letter in the British press Lord Cecil, who used to be Britain's representative on the league, adds his own distinguished disapproval. This record would have been expunged if the Labor government had agreed to a reversal of the White Paper policy in favor of 100,000 entries.

Palestine, of course, cannot be expected to provide a home for all the Jews who want to flee Europe. There are about 200,000 left. President Truman, who offered to assist the British in transporting and settling 100,000 Jews in Palestine, has appealed to Congress to authorize a readjustment of our unfilled quotas in behalf of the Jewish homeless, as well as other displaced persons in Germany. No action has yet been taken on his request. Perhaps, now that the whole issue has been put in the U. N.'s lap, consideration might be given to a Lebanese proposal to allocate entries among the 55 nations. This would mean only a slight addition to populations. It could be accomplished without doing violence to nationally established policies governing immigration. Surely our first task after overcoming the armed might that supported Hitler should have been to succor and resettle his victims. This is a moral obligation that will remain on our conscience until it is liquidated. The determination of the future status of Palestine should be secondary to this problem in the consideration of the United Nations.

Inventory Losses

In replying to the President's appeal to reduce prices wherever possible at all levels, the United States Chamber of Commerce recognized a responsibility to do so "when business costs permit." This conditional response is far from encouraging, since it appears to imply that there is no effective way of keeping down prices or reducing them when costs rise. That is not the attitude taken by far-seeing businessmen when they reach the conclusion that prices have risen unduly and should be brought down in order to stimulate buying or prevent recession. In the long run markdowns may be good business, even though they result in heavy reductions on slow-moving goods, which leave the seller little or no profit, sometimes, indeed, losses on certain items.

Montgomery Ward & Co., for example, has evidently done a lot of price-cutting to clear out undesirable inventory. For its sales for the last three months are estimated to have risen to 250 million dollars—a 24 per cent increase over the same period in 1946. Net profits, however, are estimated at 12.5 million dollars—a decline of 7 per cent from last year. Higher advertising costs and higher wages account for part of the drop in profits. But increased markdowns on merchandise have also contributed to the decline. The company has been cutting down inventories by clearing out undesirable goods, and at the same time placing smaller advance orders with manufacturers for future delivery, particularly in lines where markdowns may become necessary. This cautious buying policy puts pressure on suppliers to reduce their prices in turn.

Montgomery Ward as well as a good many other concerns are acting on the assumption that prices are higher than they should be and are wisely taking steps to prepare for storms ahead instead of seeking cover after the deluge. The old adage "First losses are best" is sound business.

Under Two Flags

As we go to press, a tart little controversy is raging about the flags now decorating the principal thoroughfares of Washington in honor of the visit of President Aleman. These, it seems, were provided by the Protocol Division of the Department of State, and the embarrassing accusation has been made that they are not Mexican flags at all but Italian flags.

The national banner of Mexico and that of Italy are alike in being comprised of vertical green, white and red stripes of approximately identical dimensions. However, the familiar Mexican flag, adopted in 1823, has superimposed on the central white stripe the figure of an eagle perched on a cactus with a serpent in its beak. This is representative of an old Aztec legend about the founding of Mexico City. After the great Mexican Revolution of 1911-20, the design was somewhat modified, and the words Estados Unidos Mexicanos were added to the device. Similarly, the familiar Italian flag had on the central white stripe the arms and crest of the House of Savoy, but when the Savoy monarchy was repudiated, this device was withdrawn.

The 645 flags obtained from New York by the State Department for the Aleman reception have no device in the middle. The small flags purchased in Mexico City by the Citizens Committee for distribution among school children and others did have the emblem of the eagle and serpent. So did the great banner which was suspended over the Memorial Bridge when President Aleman entered the city, and so, for that matter, did the flag flown from The Post Building, which had been specially sent up from Texas for the occasion.

However, the State Department insists that green, white and red flags without the emblem are perfectly appropriate, since this is the flag of the Mexican merchant marine. And if this flag has any resemblance to the Italian flag, it is an interesting, but not necessarily awkward, coincidence, and, anyway, the Mexican Embassy, which had been consulted on all details of the celebration, had approved it. On this point the State Department is supported by the color plates in the front of the latest edition of Webster's International Dictionary.

It remains to be seen whether this explanation will suffice to close the controversy. Meanwhile, as the result of a soaking by the tremendous rainstorm on Wednesday evening, and a bleaching by yesterday's warm sun, the banners are gradually losing their resemblance to either Mexican or Italian flags. The red is fading to a kind of orange, so that after a little more rain and a little more bleaching they would serve quite appropriately to welcome Prime Minister DeValera of Eire, should he ever decide to visit us in his official capacity.

Healthy Reminder

"Liberation" of objects of value from inhabitants of enemy as well as liberated areas was, it must be confessed, a favorite pastime of GIs. By whatever name it was dignified, this was in fact looting. Most of it was too inconsequential to mention, though the moral infraction was the same in all cases. But occasionally there was an instance of such flagrant violation of all ethics of behavior that the Army could not overlook it without seeming to condone wholesale burglary.

Of such character was the audacious theft of the Hesse jewels. Several officers were implicated in this $1,500,000 steal, including Col. Jack W. Durant and his wife, a Wac captain. It is an altogether healthy thing that Colonel Durant has just been sentenced to 15 years at hard labor for his part in the theft, following a five-year sentence given Mrs. Durant last fall. Other similar cases have been prosecuted, and doubtless there are more that should be. For what is a reprehensible practice in any case is particularly unforgivable when it concerns officers. This is a matter on which the Army must be its own policeman. The standards of moral conduct it enforces are closely bound up with what people in other countries think of us.

AUTUMN NIGHT

The cricket chorus pulses the end of summer.
The luminous arch of the milky way bends over the earth, and the stars gleam.
And unheard overhead the space waves
are curved with violin and piano sound, orchestra and voice moving mingled like water up to the earth's shell.
And far, in what unknown lanes,
the melodies not yet written,
the songs unsung: a man's ears
are not yet keen enough for them;
a man's ears are tuned to the cricket pulse,
to the lovable brothers of earth
singing beside their stone-roofed doors before they lay them down to sleep.

Longer Skirts

I am writing to you because I think your influential paper can do a lot to bring to an end a frumpish fashion. I mean these awful longer skirts that the dictatorial fashion experts are trying to make popular.

From early Saxon times up to a few years ago fashions, especially women's, were drab, dowdy, and generally unattractive. This Second World War brought women out of themselves more than had any previous calamity. Skirts became really short, so that at last you could really see the glamorous, shapely legs that Almighty God had given them. That marvelous gift to mankind which is Woman has never been fully appreciated or understood up to now. It is about time she got a break.

The American film censorship board should be kicked from Hollywood to Alaska. Their disordered minds are full to the brim with negativeness and narrow-mindedness, prudery and heavy-handed repression. Unless they are removed from office, they will eventually ruin American technicolor musical films because at present their ruthless hands remove from films all the natural robust heartiness and natural stimulation that is so right and necessary for relaxing and brightening entertainment.

The longer skirts which the Hitlerite fashion designers are so fond of are a revolting offense to the eye, an insult to the demands of progress, and a libel on good taste. May pretty women everywhere refuse with withering scorn to wear them and wear their skirts and dresses as short as they desire in the name of beauty, freedom and progress.

Arlington Election

Saturday, May 3, is the deadline for meeting the poll tax requirements for participation in the 1947 Virginia primary and general election. This may well be the most critical election year in Arlington's political history.

At stake is the control of the county board, possibly the school board, the county judgeship, the State legislative delegation, and the offices of sheriff, Commonwealth's attorney, commissioner of revenue, and treasurer.

Return of the control of these offices to the people will smash the Arlington branch of the State political machine. A peoples' victory is dependent upon the number of voters in the May 27 special election, the August primary, and the November general election.

In 1945 there were only 5000 voters in the general election and the "machine" candidates carried Arlington with ease. There were 11,000 voters in the 1946 election, largest nonpresidential election in Arlington's history.

The power of the machine is based on the voting strength of a large number of political jobholders within a very restricted electorate. The poll tax is the main device for cutting down the number of voters. It cannot be gotten rid of by refusing to pay it. The poll tax restriction can be eventually removed only if enough uncontrolled and disinterested people pay their poll taxes and vote. The tax is $1.50 a year with a slight increase for late payment. Those who have not received a tax bill should contact the commissioner of revenue at the courthouse immediately.

East Side Traffic

The traffic congestion on Benning rd. ne. is rapidly becoming so intense as to be alarming. The population of the far Northeast and Southeast and adjacent Maryland has quadrupled in the last decade, but no additional arterial highways to this rapidly growing section have been provided by the local government.

When the traffic light at Minnesota ave. at Benning rd. changes, traffic is often backed up to the bridge over the Anacostia River. To pass this intersection often requires waiting for several lights to change.

To relieve this congestion, Benning rd. should be widened from 15th and N sts. ne. to the viaduct and should be paved from curb to curb. Benning viaduct should be widened and an underpass constructed over Minnesota ave.

Access to Oklahoma ave. from the west should be improved so as to relieve Benning rd. west of that intersection. A highway intersecting Benning rd. at 34th st. ne. and extending northward to Lee st. should be opened. Deane ave. should be extended on both sides of the street car tracks to Kenilworth ave. and paved from Kenilworth ave. to Eastern ave. This would give traffic relief to the Deanwood-Kenilworth ave. section, Burville and Seat Pleasant and other adjacent Maryland towns.

An additional bridge should be constructed over the Anacostia River at about the extension of M st. This is approximately the location of a proposed bridge to provide an entrance for traffic from the proposed Baltimore-Washington parkway. This bridge would connect with Maryland ave. ne. and an additional arterial highway to the Northwest could be provided by extending Mount Olivet rd. which parallels Florida ave. ne., now also very badly congested.

"Taft Vs. Bowles"

Your April 24 editorial, "Taft vs. Bowles," is really fine. And, as you so intelligently explain, all of Mr. Bowles' predictions of inflation have borne fruit.

Your good writer, however, missed just one important point in this editorial. The reason we are in trouble now is that with OPA there were no goods on the shelves, no meat on the butchers' racks and counters. The OPA price on choice beef was 66 cents a pound. The non-OPA price today on that same meat at the Safeway Stores is 65 cents a pound. But unfortunately for all of us the butcher has tons of tempting steaks, roasts, etc., on display and with our mouths a-watering we spend all of our money. We overbuy, and the result is we are all broke.

With OPA and Mr. Bowles there would be no meat, little of anything else to buy and so we would all be well off with lots of cash in our pockets. Please understand this is no criticism of your splendid editorial. Just in case anyone should have the slightest doubts that OPA must be revived it is suggested that you augment your next "Back to OPA" editorial with this important thought. Briefly, this thought is that with OPA there would be no meat, few radios, autos, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, and very few building supplies, and with few things to spend money on we would all be well off and very happy. I am sure it was just an oversight that your editorial writer missed this clincher. Keep up the great crusade!

Rural Dentists

Right now I would like to see a dentist attached to rural high schools.

A friend of mine attending high school in Virginia needs some dental work. I have the money but there is no dentist in the village.

There should be a State or Federal mobile dental laboratory to cover rural districts.

Economy Vs. Western Development

This letter is an appeal across the country, in the hope that even yet something may be done to salvage a little from the wreckage committed last week by the Eastern Republicans. As it looks from here our Columbia River development in Oregon, Washington and Idaho has been set back a decade.

The Northwest cannot adequately defend itself politically, since our congressional and electoral college strength is small. Apparently GOP Chairman Reece and his man, Congressman Taber, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, have cold-bloodedly decided to sacrifice the Northwest to show something for their campaign pledges to Eastern finance and capital that there would be tax cuts. The letter is an appeal, over their heads, to the fair-minded people of all regions who place national interest above sectional or corporate interests.

These projects are not tax burdens. All of them are self-liquidating, and greatly increase the total national wealth by developing our unused land and waterpower and natural resources. Bonneville Dam, whose budget was cut 47 per cent and whose growing usefulness was halted where it is, is repaying the Federal Treasury well ahead of schedule. If this is Republican economics, its folly will lose that party the Northwest region again in 1948, as in the last four presidential elections, in spite of basic Republican majorities at least in Idaho and Oregon.

For months threats and indecent proposals of compromise have alternately been made to the Northwest. Most specific of these, which Secretary Krug properly rejected, was the Bonneville power rates (the lowest in the Nation) be doubled, so that Eastern industry could compete with its expensive diesel plants. This public-be-damned proposal, put forth by GOP Congressmen Jones and Jensen on behalf of Eastern industry, reflects the hostility of some elements to the rapid industrialization of this area.

And when we protested through Senator Morse and others, Chairman Taber, speaking for the Republican majority, dismissed our pleas as (according to an April 22 Associated Press dispatch widely published here) "the squeal of a stuck pig."

Already we are drawing up our battle-lines to do the best we can with our limited regional strength. Through Americans for Democratic Action, and our regional Grange Farmers Union and labor groups, we will try to see to it that Senators Morse, Taylor and Mangnusson have solid congressional support next time. But our ultimate appeal has to be to fair-minded people everywhere who view this as a national, not a sectional, problem—and with them we rest our case.

From the earliest days, when Thomas Jefferson was opposed in his request for funds for the Lewis and Clark expedition which made this region part of the United States, every step in its development has been aided by forward-looking Americans from all section. To them we appeal for help again now, knowing that they will see in our case more than, as Chairman Taber put it, "the squeal of a stuck pig."

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Soil Conservation

BEHIND THE warm-hearted greeting for President Miguel Aleman of Mexico is a serious objective. The hope is to link the two countries as equal partners in a working relationship.

President Aleman and his Secretary of Finance, Ramon Beteta, want loans to promote Mexico's industrial and farm production. They realize that greater production, and quickly, is the only cure for Mexico's threatening inflation. In both Washington and New York, they are discussing loans from the United States, from the World Bank and from private banking sources.

It so happens that there is one kind of aid which President Truman can offer to President Aleman without any fear of what Congress may do or say. In fact, it is Congress that seems determined to make this form of aid possible.

The suggestion originally came from Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson. Shortly before Aleman's visit, he reminded the President that an economy-minded Congress seemed determined to pare down the reclamation and soil conservation work being done by our Government. This said Anderson, would release a number of top technicians and experts who understand how to work with soil and water to make the earth give forth in abundance. The United States today has the greatest body of such experts in the world. What is more, they have a high scarcity value. Nations all over the world want to use their technical skill to build up basic natural resources.

IF A NUMBER of these experts could be encouraged to go to Mexico, they could at least be kept in this hemisphere, where they would help to build the productivity of a good neighbor. President Truman thought well of the suggestion and passed it on to his friend President Aleman.

Mexico already has an extensive program of dam building and irrigation, with her own corps of technicians. Expansion of this program would mean an immediate demand for more men with the proper know-how, and such men do not grow on trees.

Particularly in Mexico's border States, development of irrigated land has gone on at a pace more rapid than in the U. S. A. That was one reason for the Mexican-U. S. A. water treaty which was ratified by the Senate in April, 1945. Mexico was beginning to use water from the Colorado River at a rate of increase greater than in this country.

India, Iran, Iraq, Palestine and many other countries with a water-land-use problem are looking to the United States for technical help. Private engineering firms are sending experts out on private contract. But there is a ceiling on this kind of help, since the number of Americans with the proper skills and knowledge is definitely limited.

ONE OF the most striking examples is that of Afghanistan, a little kown country which lies across the Khyber Pass between India and Iran. Some years ago, a visitor from Afghanistan came to this country to learn about our irrigation and conservation projects. The visitor, Mohammed Kabir Ludin, talked with officials here in Washington and inspected projects in the Western States.

Now commissioner of public works in Afghanistan, Mohammed Kabir Ludin is putting into practice what he learned in the United States. Using money which his government has on deposit in New York, he has signed a contract with a United States engineering firm to initiate a sizable irrigation project.

In this is a contrast that is very funny. At least, it is funny in one sense of the word. Afghanistan, a small country in the highlands of the Himalayas, can afford what the greatest power in the world says, through its Congress, that it cannot afford.

It should, of course, be put another way. The richest country in the world can hardly afford not to conserve its soils and to develop new soil and water resources. Economy that shuts off such projects is tragically shortsighted.

That is obviously something our neighbors south of the border have learned. They will borrow money and they will borrow technicians to restore and replenish the good earth of Mexico. We seem to be determined to go in just the opposite direction, chasing an economy wholly false in terms of the basic wealth and the basic needs of our own people.

Labor Bill

If the GOP and true Democrats enact a labor bill that will take from the labor dictators those special privileges which have enabled them to do so much damage to business, consumers and the Government and restrict them to equal rights with all other classes, they will deserve the gratitude of the whole Nation.

If President Truman vetoes the bill, like he did the Case bill, so that strikes and business turmoil can continue unmolested, many Democrats may do like General Forrest did at Fort Donaldson. The ranking generals held a council of war and decided to surrender. Forrest arose and said he had carefully inspected all the ground and knew all could retreat safely, and when the ranking generals said "No," Forrest said, "You will not surrender me and my division." He led his 5000 men out, proving that all could have retreated safely.

If the GOP enacts a righteous labor bill and President Truman and others should induce the Democratic Party to favor special privileges to the labor unions and a raw deal for all others, does anybody doubt the election results in 1948?

Renascent Japan

By Clarke H. Kawakami

Western Books Give Spiritual Revival

Editor's Note: Mr. Kawakami served as a lieutenant in the United States Army during the war and worked with the Office of War Information in the China-Burma-India Theater. He is now in Tokyo attached to American general headquarters in a civilian capacity.

ARNOLD TOYNBEE in his stupendous work, A Study of History, says that when a nation enters the period of what he calls the "universal state" it begins to disintegrate because its "creative minorities" turn to the past, idolize "ephemeral institutions," become militaristic and commit suicidal blunders.

Whatever the validity of this theory, it seems to fit into Japan's contemporary history. Japan, under the leadership of its militaristic minorities, attained a "universal state," extending its domain into Korea, Manchuria, and Formosa. Thus she became militaristic, glorified herself, and apotheosized the mythical notion of Hakko-Ichiu disinterred from the obscurity of 26 centuries to justify her "divine mission" in "Greater East Asia."

Today the Japanese are groping for a new philosophy. Gathering themselves up from the effects of the devastating defeat, they are again in a mood to turn to the West for inspiration and guidance.

ONE CLEAR SIGN of this new trend is an increasing demand for Western literature and Western books on philosophy, politics and economics. Already the demand is so great that publishers, harassed by paper shortages, mounting labor cost and difficulties involved in obtaining translation rights, are unable to keep up with it.

Open the front or back cover of any one of the leading magazines published in Tokyo, and you cannot fail to notice book advertisements. They are all small ads, each taking up a space seldom larger than an inch square. Yet some of them announce prodigious enterprises such as the translation of Goethe's major works in 20 volumes, each comprising at least 400 pages; the works of Walt Whitman in eight volumes, and the works of Andre Gide in 15 volumes. Some of the writings of Johan Friedrich von Schiller, Goethe's close friend, are also being translated. One publisher is offering John Dewey's philosophical works in eight volumes. These are all new translations which are to be completed in a year or more.

As you thumb the magazine further you come upon a loose sheet inserted between pages. This, too, is an advertisement announcing the projected publication of a 15-volume series of translated works on socialistic thought from Plato to contemporary American and European writers. The series includes Fourier's Theory of the Four Movements and General Destinies, Marx's Capital, Kropotkin's Conquest of Bread, Proudhon's What is Property?, Sorel's Reflections on Violence, Sidney and Beatrice Webb's works, Lenin's Imperialism, Thorstein Veblen's Theory of the Leisure Class.

AMONG OTHER books advertised are selected works of Sainte-Beuve, Taine's Philosophie de l'Art, Wilhelm and Max Wundt's works on psychology and philosophy, Gide Rist's History of Economic Doctrines, and selections in 15 volumes from Nobel Prize novels. A few of Anatole France's and Emil Zola's novels are also being translated.

Nor are the Japanese neglecting Shakespeare. The late Dr. Shoyo Tsubouchi's standard translation of the complete dramatic works of Shakespeare is enjoying a revival. Some of Shakespeare's plays are being presented by Japanese actors and actresses to packed Japanese audiences in one of Tokyo's surviving theaters.

Almost all the Western books selected for translation are those which have withstood the withering test of time. It is highly significant that Goethe, Whitman and Dewey should become favorites among the Japanese intellectuals of today. Having endured years of militaristic-bureaucratic regimentation, they find in the teachings of Goethe, Whitman and Dewey a refreshing, invigorating individualism. The German poet and dramatist rebelled against the Roman Church and the centralization of authority. His philosophy of life was to realize the ideal by the idealization of the real; he preached in Faust, that men could rise only by altruistic efforts.

To the author of Leaves of Grass spirituality is to be the crowning glory of the United States. Walt Whitman glorified democracy, championed the cause of the common man, and apotheosized the democratic brotherhood which he believed could be attained through the freedom of the individual. And the Japanese are translating not only the Leaves of Grass but eight of Whitman's other works.

John Ruskin, in his lecture on architecture, says: "Taste is not only a part and an index of morality—it is the only morality." And he adds: "What we like determines what we are, and is the sign of what we are; and to teach taste is inevitably to form character."

If the great English pre-Raphaelite is right, then the quality of the books now favored by Japanese seems to indicate that their country, bankrupt in most respects, is at least morally solvent. It encourages the belief that a leaven is quietly working within Japan's body social for the creation of a new nation not merely seeking economic recuperation but animated with moral and spiritual aspirations.

MODERN JAPAN has been a spiritual vacuum. Dazzled by the material splendor of the Western civilization with which they so suddenly came into contact, modern Japanese worshiped what Ruskin called the "goddess of getting on" and were inclined to ignore the fact that that civilization rested upon a foundation more spiritual than material. To fill this spiritual vacuum something more than Buddhism, Shinto and utilitarian Confucianism, more than the words of Shakespeare and Goethe and a host of Western idealists is needed.

Here is a challenge to Christianity and Christian teachers, both Japanese and foreign. This perhaps explains why American missionaries are hoping and planning to come to Japan in large numbers. But mere numerical strength of missionaries offers no assurance that their evangelical work will be crowned with success. It must be supported with keen intellect and a high degree of scientific and philosophical knowledge as well as with spiritual ardor and love of labor, at least on the part of their leaders. The fact that such books as I have named are now popular among the Japanese is proof that the field is hardly for neophyte missionaries. Meanwhile, it is encouraging that native Christian leaders, notably Toyohiko Kagawa, are reaping large harvests of converts.

Matter Of Fact

Henry Wallace And The Great Debate

LONDON.—Unless the crystal balls of a great many politicians, economists and other observers here are more than usually clouded, by next year, when the dollars of the American loan will probably have run out, a great debate will be raging on both sides of the Atlantic. The issue of this debate will be of profound historic importance. For in essence it will be concerned with whether this island is to remain Great Britain or to become little England; with whether or not England is to remain a major force in world affairs.

The debate has already been in intermittent progress here for many months. It is the essential point at issue between Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin and the Labor Party rebels. Bevin, backed by the great majority in Parliament, wishes to cooperate with the United States in containing Soviet expansion, and wishes England to continue to carry her heavy load of international commitments to the best of her ability. The rebels, on the other hand, wish to divorce British policy completely from American policy, to cut British commitments all over the world and to follow a policy of appeasement toward the Soviet Union.

Few observers believe that the issue will be decided until some time next year, when it is almost universally expected that the great British economic crisis will come to a head. Meanwhile, however, a kind of sneak preview, a special flareup of the issue, was occasioned by the recent visit here of Henry Agard Wallace, under the auspices of the New Statesman and Nation, intellectual organ of the Labor rebels.

In certain political quarters Wallace was hailed as a Daniel come to judgment, and in others as a fool and a rogue. But the most general reaction seems to have been one of genuine puzzlement. An American in these parts is very apt to be asked, "What is Wallace really getting at, anyway?" That is not an easy question to answer. But whatever he has been trying to get at, the net effect of his visit has certainly been to strengthen the hands of all those who would like to see a wedge driven between the foreign policies of England and the United.

WALLACE HAS a special capacity for allowing himself to be used as a sounding board. The extent to which this is true is illustrated by an apparently reliable description of the way in which his first, important London speech was prepared. The speech was brought out at a meeting between Wallace, Michael Straight, amiable and intelligent angel of the New Republic; R. H. S. Crossman, spokesman and leader of the Labor Party rebels, and Kingsley Martin, chief of the rebels' brain trust, and editor of the New Statesman. Crossman, and Martin are two of the most brilliant and articulate (if occasionally badly misinformed) men in England.

At this meeting, they are reported to have positively glittered with brilliance. They strode up and down sending forth a rich shower of ideas, while Straight acted as an awed amanuensis, jotting down the jewels which fell from the English lips, and Henry Wallace watched the display with an air of misty benevolence. Then in Central Hall in Westminster, Wallace, carefully wrapped in the political mantle of Franklin Roosevelt, read a speech which was largely a result of this curious collaboration. The speech, together with others which followed, has of course provided Crossman, Martin and their followers with much useful ammunition for attacks on the Labor government for working too closely with "imperialist" America.

OTHER GROUPS also found Wallace a useful sounding board here. At least two high Labor Party officials have expressed honest bewilderment that he allowed himself to appear under the sponsorship of such organizations as the Lancashire Trades Council and the British Students' Federation. According to these men, any knowledgeable British trades unionist knows that the Lancashire organization was captured by the Communists some years ago, and that the Students' Federation is one of the most closely controlled of the British Communist Party fronts.

Wallace is no more a Communist than the vast majority of the Labor Party rebels. Yet that he appeared under such auspices is as typical of his confusion of mind as the fact that names like that of Howard Fast appeared on the embossed scroll of greetings from American "progressives" to British progressives which Wallace brought with him. Wallace could hardly have been ignorant of the fact that Fast's name also appeared on the masthead of the Communists' New Masses. It is this sort of thing which goes a long way toward justifying the description of Wallace which appeared in an English newspaper: "A child in a great dark."

There is no doubt that Wallace's short descent on England has its effect, and that many people here are vaguely convinced that since Wallace repeatedly pointed out that he wants peace, President Truman and Secretary of State George C. Marshall must want war. But the effect can be exaggerated.

The great issues increasingly confronting England — whether to maintain her commitments and continue to join the United States in opposing Russian expansion, or to cut her commitments and appease the Soviet Union—is not likely to be decided by any number of speeches. It will be decided rather by the size and shape of the economic crisis which will come when the American dollars run out and the British export program has not yet taken up the slack. For foreign commitments are expensive, and a fire in the grate will certainly seem far more important to many cold and hungry Englishmen.

Thus the issue will confront the United States as well. Nothing is more obvious, especially to one who has just seen the Near and Middle East at first hand, than that a working partnership agreement with a reasonably strong England is essential to the American effort to contain Russian expansion. But a partnership agreement is not much use if one of the partners is financially bankrupt and economically ruined.

Isolationist Revival

By Ernest Lindley

House Foreign Relief Cut Alarming

TWO HUNDRED twenty-five members of the House voted to reduce the proposed European relief appropriation from 350 million to 200 million dollars. Sixty-six voted against the bill on the final roll-call after the amount had been reduced.

Lindley

The latter group, with the exception of a few who may have been moved by special considerations, must be regarded as a hard core of isolationism. Pairs and absentees increase its size somewhat. It appears to represent about 20 per cent of the membership of the House, mostly on the Republican side.

The vote in the Senate on aid to Greece and Turkey revealed a hard core of isolationism of about the same relative size: approximately 20 per cent. Three of the negative votes in the Senate came from the "Wallace bloc" and two or three were special cases.

AMONG THE Senators who supported aid to Greece and Turkey were a number who, by their record on comparable questions last year, must be regarded as unreliable supporters of the foreign policy of the United States. Many of the members of the House who voted to reduce the European relief appropriations by 150 million dollars must now be placed in the same category. This reduction is, in its effect, a blow at our foreign policy. It will not be a serious blow, if the Senate repairs the damage. But it gives the impression that Congress is not back of the policy of using the economic and financial power of the United States to help Europe to its feet and thus to repel communism.

The relation of the 350-million-dollar relief fund to the so-called Truman Doctrine was slightly clouded by the inclusion of countries now under Communist or Russian control. However, this control is incomplete in a number of countries in eastern Europe and we do not accept it as permanent. The judicious use of American relief funds could weaken Russian influence in such countries as Poland and Hungary. The Mundt amendment, adopted by the House, furnishes a safeguard against the distribution of relief to serve the political purposes of the Russians or their Communist puppets.

It is clear that the United States will have to spend or lend considerably larger amounts than were heretofore contemplated to restore the economies of the free nations of Europe. This is recognized by at least a few of the Representatives who voted to reduce the relief fund. They will vote for the full program of aid to Greece and Turkey.

THESE TESTS are only the first of several of great importance. Among the others will be the votes on appropriations to support the occupation of Germany, Austria, Japan, and Korea. The amount of money needed will be even larger, at least, for Korea, than was estimated when the President submitted his budget in January.

What is done about the State Department's informational and cultural program abroad is another important test. Failure to continue this program with adequate appropriations would leave the Government of the United States without any means of combatting Communist and other hostile propaganda abroad.

The appropriations voted for the armed services will be vitally important tests, also.

Some who vote to slash these various appropriations in support of the foreign policy of the United States will deny that their purpose is to undermine that policy. But that will be the effect, and no amount of explanation will conceal the fact. Some economies here and there may be possible. But the over-all goals of economy tentatively set by the Republicans strike at the heart of the bipartisan foreign policy and the security of the United States. The issue is not one which can be straddled.

British Increase Whisky Exports to Get Dollars

London, May 1 (AP).—Whisky supplies, effectively today, were cut nearly 50 per cent throughout the United Kingdom.

The reason for the cut, announced by the Scotch Whisky Association, is a government decision to send three-quarters of the annual output abroad to get dollars and other hard currencies.

This means about 45 million quarts for overseas drinkers, mostly American, and 15 million quarts for Britons in the next year.

...And You Can Spike the Movie

Hushed Acolytes Hear An Inspired Reading of Classics by M. Jones

By Richard L. Coe

THAT MODEST SERVANT of the muses, Spike Jones, returned to the stage of the Capitol Theater yesterday with his orchestral and choral aggregation, Les Sleekairs de Ville (The City Slickers).

Music lovers crowded into the intimate F st. concert hall, and to even the dreamiest eye it was evident many students had reluctantly turned from their lecture halls to har the well-loved favorite of Les Boites de Juke (The Jukeboxes).

Merle Oberon

Their impatience for the appearance of the master made the accustomed lantern slides a minor matter of the programme. Since the week's feature slide, entitled "Temptation," is an antiquated chromo of cinematic cliches, their taste in preferring the master's ensemble is praiseworthy.

For the sartorially exquisite Jones is understandably a spirit kin to their youthful hearts. Yesterday the master had chosen to appear in a suit of simple red checks. His shirt was of electric blue, the combination giving the effect of orage des montagnes).

Jones' face, too, has a definitely spiritual quality. This is quite unlike the facial fire of Arturo Toscanini. It suggests more the quality of a square hatchet, perhaps because it so strikingly resembles that home instrument. To his martyred facial appearance, Jones adds a touch of the inner turmoil he must feel by employing an unknown brand of chewing gum on which he constantly masticates with unconcealed enjoyment.

A Canny Virtuoso

Over his unusual instruments, the master presidens with dignity. When he shoots pistols and rifles he has the tenderness not to point them at the audience, but aims them toward the roof, from which only a few feathered creatures descend now and then. He achieves splendid tones from his automobile horn and one was impressed with the vigorous C shary given by a well-tuned tomato can.

His colleagues achieve heights of artistry with such chansons as "You Always Hurt the One You Love," "Holiday for Strings," "The Sheik of Araby" and a touching rendition of "Glow Worm." They present a pleasing light note from a consummate artist, one Doodles Weaver, recently rescued from the vulgar precincts of Le Ruban Bleu (Le Ruban Bleu.)

There is something of a novelty in the undulate rhythms of a Hawaiian War Chant, and their offering concludes with their long-loved disc masterpiece, "Les Contes de Coq pour Deux" (freely "Cocktails for Two").

The end of the performance found the disciples remaining faithfully in their seats, disdainful of scholarly chores which faced them on their return to their other duties. (The master is adding a midnight concert tonight.)

"TEMPTATION." International Pictures release produced by Edward Small. Directed by Irving Pichel. Screenplay by Robert Thoeren from the novel "Bella Donna" by Robert Hichens and the play by J. B. Fagan. At the Capitol Theater.

"Temptation"

"Temptation" is a juicy dish of broken hearts and tombs of ancient Egypt. The period is Egypt at the turn of the centry and the two leads are a woman who wants to kill her husband and her lover who wants to kill her.

The Cairo and desert settings of 47 years ago seem to be faithful reproductions and for the small minority who may be homesick for the simple galabayias (housecoats) and lack of servant problems in Egypt the firm will have some appeal.

Merle Oberon plays the Robert Hichens heroine (remember "Bella Donna"? and looks beautiful in the clothes of the period. Charles Korvin (the tip of whose nose appears to have been efficavated from the center of his chin) acts the surly Egyptian fortune-hunter with srleek assurance. George Brent is the poor husband who almost loses his life.

Lenore Ulric is effective as Merle's confidential maid. The rest of the company treats the charade with affection if not slam-bang excitement.

"The Locket" is holding a second week at the Metropolitan, in case you haven't already noted same in the ads. This is the triple flash-back picture starring Laraine Day which you're urged to see from the beginning. Otherwise, you'll drive yourself mad trying to figure out what gives.

George Washington University's May Queen is holding court in Lisner Auditorium tonight at 8, for which Cue and Curtain will present scenes from their recent version of "King Lear." The girls' and men's glee clubs will sing.

Answering several phone calls on our Film Library column, here are this week's juvenile films set for 10 a. m. Saturday at four Warner theaters: "Alice in Wonderland," at the Uptown; "National Velvet," at the Tivoli; "My Pal Wolf," at the Silver, and "Little Miss Marker," at the Penn. These theaters will be playing children's films on Saturday mornings the first Saturday of each month through August. The Beverly, Avalon, Calvert and Kennedy offer them the third Saturday of each month and the Sheridan on the fourth Saturday.

Hope Diamond Tales

New York, May 1.—The Hope Diamond, of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean, frequently was exhibited in the night clubs of New York. Bea Lillie once crawled under a table at the Stork Club and found the gem there, where Mrs. McLean had lost it. Another night, at the Kit Kat, Mrs. McLean swung it as if it were a sling shot, at Elliott Roosevelt. At Fefe's Monte Carlo, where two detectives accompanied Mrs. McLean and her daughter, the bodyguards were asked: "Suppose one mob tries for the diamond and another mob tries to kidnap Miss McLean—which would you protect first?" The bodyguards replied: "We'd go for the diamond" . . . Mrs. McLean once sent a portable radio to a friend in the hospital. The patient twisted the dials, but the radio was dead. He lifted it, shook it—and out rolled the Hope Diamond.

The Attorney-General is heeding the pleas of the Italian government, and will rule that Milton Shubert, who bought the rights to the Puccini music, will not be permitted to make any alterations . . . Valentin Parera, husband of the late Grace Moore, will produce a film in Mexico . . . Mme. Alma Claybugrh, who has gained 35 pounds in the last few months, blames it on the bread and butter she has with each meal. "I can't enjoy a meal without bread and butter," she sighed. "I wish there were some organization I could join, like 'Bread and Butter Anonymous'" . . . Mrs. Franz Werfel is writing a book about her husband.

Arthur Kennedy, who plays the leading role in "All My Sons," has become the most sought-after actor on the stage today. There was a time, only a few years ago, when Kennedy besieged the producer' offices, applying for a job. Once, for many months, he visited the office of Arthur Hopkins every afternoon. Hopkins always greeted him by shaking his head, to indicate "No Casting Today." One afternoon, Kennedy decided: "At least this time I'll get Mr. Hopkins to say something to me. I'd like at least to hear his voice." He went to Hopkins' office, received the head-shake and then asked: "What time is it?" Hopkins stared at the young actor, then slowly reached into his pocket, drew his watch—and showed it to Kennedy.

W. Arthur Nickel, who bought an E. 81st st. mansion with his share of the Mergenthaler embezzlement money, had a contractor rip out walls and bathrooms, to make a duplex and a triplex apartment. The new owner is reconverting it into a one-family house . . . The original of Miguel Covarrubias' painting of a map of California, to which Life Magazine bought the reproduction rights, disappeared at the Luce publications offices.

John Ringling North tells of a circus juggler he employed until last season, The Magnificent Trumi. One night North invited Robert Benchley and some friends to see his circus. Before the show they had a long-lasting party, at which absinthe constantly was poured into martinis, which in turn, constantly poured into the guests. Then they staggered to Madison Square Garden, where The Magnificent Trumi juggled three plates, an axe, 6 torches and five balls, at the same time. "And I," Benchley, "can't even get a cuppa coffee up to my mouth."

Observers who watched Joe Louis play a round at the Sprain Lake Golf Course recently vow that the champ made a hole-in-one . . . When one of Leopold Stokowski's contemporaries was puzzled by Stokowski's varying announcements about his correct age, and said: "Why would Stokey lop off a few years?" Virgil Thomson explained: 'Stokowski is a professional beauty" . . . At Jane Pickens' home last night, Abram Chasins, the pianist, listened to a discussion of Jose Iturbi. "You know Iturbi, don't you?" Chasins was asked. He replied: "Only personally; not by reputation."

At the clubrooms of the Century Association, the exclusive literary club which is celebrating its 100th anniversary, a warning notice was placed on the bulletin board: "We do not know the name of the member involved—but a brief-case was seen inside the club last week" . . . After the American Art show was exhibited in Prague, the Soviets brought in a display of Russian art. A fleet of Red planes then soared over the city and scattered admission tickets all over Prague.

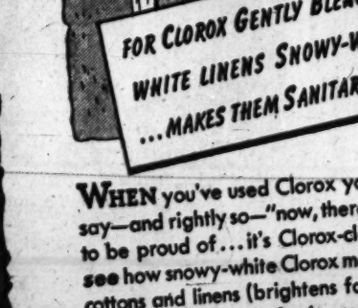
Cloudy skies will envelop Maine, Mississippi, Alabama, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Montana, Idaho, Washington and upper Michigan. People wouldn't think of reading by candlelight in this modern age of electricity . . .



and Millions of Women wouldn't think of Laundering without Clorox . . .

WHEN you've used Clorox your senses say—and rightly so—"now, there's a wash to be proud of . . . it's Clorox-clean!" You see how snowy-white Clorox makes white cottons and linens (brightens fast colors); you smell their clean freshness; you hear praise of their beauty! Moreover, there's an invisible virtue enjoyed by Clorox users . . . their laundry is sanitary. And Clorox conserves fabrics in two ways . . . an important economy in these days of high linen prices: First, Clorox bleaches and brightens extra-gently because it's ultra-refined . . . free from caustic and other harsh substances . . . it is made by an exclusive patented process. Second, Clorox reduces hard rubbing . . . it not only conserves linens, it saves time and work as well. Yes, your senses and your good judgment agree . . . Clorox is tops in laundering!

When it's Clorox-clean . . . it's hygienically clean!

Clorox provides an extra margin of health protection in routine kitchen and bathroom cleansing. It disinfects . . . also deodorizes and removes stains. Simply follow directions on the label.

CLOROX America's Favorite Bleach and Household Disinfectant
FIRST IN QUALITY . . . FIRST IN PERFORMANCE . . . FIRST IN PREFERENCE!

New York Cotton

New York, May 1 (AP).—Cotton futures moved irregularly and closed 65 cents a bale lower to 90 cents higher today. Mill buying and short covering advanced prices, but liquidating persisted.

Traders continued apprehensive over a generally lower trend of prices, lack of activity in the textile market, and the possibility of a large increase in cotton acreage this year. Distant months, which sold around the currently indicated Government loan level next season, attracted some support.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

THERE is a growing group of middle-of-the-road Congressmen—both Democrats and Republicans—who would like to see a common-sense labor bill passed by Congress, but not one which would destroy trade unionism.

Rep. Smith

They believe that certain flagrant labor abuses, such as jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, should and must be corrected. But they don't want to knock out the basic rights of labor.

At the rate some congressional leaders are going, however, there will be no labor bill at all. For if the tough Taft-Hartley version is finally sent to the White House, it is certain to be vetoed. And it's doubtful whether Congress can pass the bill over Truman's head.

Middle-of-the-road Congressmen point out that this would leave the country without any labor bill at all—which may be what top Republican leaders want.

The other day, however, fair-minded GOP Senator Alexander Smith of New Jersey went to the White House and told Truman that he wanted his views on a science bill. He said that on anything as important as scientific development, he considered it wise for Congress to work with the White House. Truman appreciated this and did his best to cooperate.

This should be the cue to fair-minded congressional leaders. If they really want a labor bill, it is only a 30-cent taxi fare down Pennsylvania ave. to the White House, where the man who used to sit in the Senate with them is always eager to confer with his former colleagues.

If Senator Taft, Representative Hartley and some of their antilabor friends would adopt a more "Vandenberg-like" approach, a labor bill fair to both the unions and business could be passed. Otherwise there probably won't be any.

State Dept. Art

MODERNISTIC art acquired by the State Department gave Republican members of a House Appropriations Subcommittee more hilarity than any hearing in years. In fact, State Department art even drew a caustic letter of criticism from President Truman himself.

United States diplomats, not knowing much about art, had hired an artists to acquire a series of portraits for foreign display purposes. Republican Congressmen got hold of these modernistic sketches and had a field day. Summoning Assistant Secretary William Benton, Chairman Karl Stefan of Nebraska stuck each picture close to Benton's eyes and asked for comment.

Benton winced. He had never seen some of the pictures before. Here is the grilling he got:

Stefan—What is this picture?

Benton—I can't tell you.

Stefan—I am putting it just about a foot from your eyes. Do you know what it is?

Benton—I won't even hazard a guess of what that picture is, Mr. Chairman.

Stefan—How much did you pay for it? You paid $700 for it and you can't identify it. Do you know what this picture is, Mr. Secretary?

Benton—I would hesitate to pass judgment on any of these pictures, Mr. Chairman.

Stefan—Do you know what this is?

Representative Horan of Washington—Are you holding it up straight?

Stefan—It is straight. Do you know what that is?

Benton—It does have a resemblance to many things that are not fit to mention before this committee.

Stefan—What would you say that was?

Benton—You are closer to it than I am, Mr. Chairman.

Stefan—Now you are closer to it than I am.

Benton—I would hesitate to pass judgment on it. My guess—

Stefan—Would you say that is a seascape or a mountainside?

Benton—I would hesitate to pass opinion on it. I am afraid the artist wouldn't like it

Stefan—What is that? (holding up another picture).

Benton—I think you might ask Mr. Horan. That looks like some of his western country. He might have some judgment on it.

Stefan—What kind of country?

Benton—It looks like good country to leave behind you, Mr. Chairman.

Stefan—Do you know what this is, Mr. Secretary? (exhibiting another picture).

Benton—I think that is much more recognizable. It seems to me to be a city scene that has very little resemblance——

Stefan—That is a bank-night scene in front of a picture show. You know what a bank-night at a picture show is?

Benton—Yes.

Stefan—Look at that, Mr. Secretary (exhibiting). Those are supposed to be human beings in a discussion on a street in the United States somewhere. Aren't you horrified yourself?

Benton—I would not use the word "horrified."

Stefan—Well, you are shocked, aren't you?

Benton—No, I wouldn't say I was shocked.

Stefan—Well, what would you say?

Benton—I would say "art."

Benton, who took the cross-examination good-naturedly, finally explained that certain modernistic pictures had been selected as a come-on to bring Latin-American and European aritsts into United States exhibits. He also said that the State Department had made a mistake in letting one man select all 79 pictures.

"The greatest genius in the world," said Benton, "could not select 79 pictures that would appeal to any four of us as all being good pictures."

Merry-Go-Round

SENATOR Joe Ball of Minnesota was sorry he went to the dinner of the National Women's Press Club. Columnist Doris Fleeson called on him to stand up and be recognized, then announced him as the man whose motto is "Liberty and No Unions Forever" . . . First reporter to call sage Representative Ewing Thomason of El Paso, Tex., when it was learned he would be nominated for a Federal judgeship was Sarah McLendon of the El Paso Times. She wanted to know if she could get his apartment . . . Incidentally, Judge Thomason's appointment is as popular as any Truman has made—though Thomason will be greatly missed in Congress . . . Last week this column listed Representative "Doc" Smith of Marion, Ohio, as voting against the Hartley labor bill. While Smith did vote against the Hartley bill, he told colleagues he did so because it was "too damned mild."

Senator Taft Stalls

DESPITE all the fanfare, home-seeking war veterans had better not hold their breath waiting for the Senate to act on the Taft public housing bill.

Now that the bill has been reported to the floor by the Senate Banking Committee, it is up to Senator Taft, himself, as author of the bill, to push it. And since he is the duly elected leader of the Senate he is in the best position possible to do so.

However, for very mysterious reasons—best known to Taft himself—the housing bill is not being given a right-of-way on the Senate calendar. Taft has even told Senate intimates that he has no immediate plans for bringing the bill up for debate.

Since House action must await Senate approval—and Representative Jesse Wolcott of Michigan, the traffic cop of housing bills in the lower chamber, is opposed to the Taft measure anyway—this urgently needed legislation may be bypassed for the remainder of the congressional session.

BARNABY

Why hold on to Gold Leaf Tobacco, Mr. Baxter? Ever since you and I bought it, it's been going down. Let's sell and take our medicine.
I feel like a fool. After all I advised Mr. Shultz to buy—Now I'm uncertain. What should I do, Ellen. Sell at a loss?
He's despondent . . . Crying over spilled milk? Well, let this be a lesson to him. When one takes a flyer in Wall Street one should do what your Fairy Godfather did.
What, Mr. O'Malley?
Buy at the low and sell at the high—But then I thought everyone knew that.

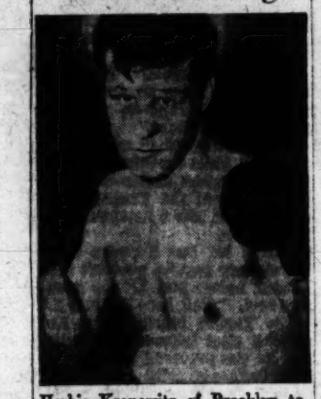
Fight Broadcast on WMAL Tonight



Herbie Kronowitz of Brooklyn tonight attempts to continue his upward climb in the middleweight division. He slugs it out in New York with George Sonny Horne (above), top-ranking 160-pounder of Valley Stream, L. I., in a ten-round shindy.

Kronowitz is a willing trader of punches—is hard to discourage. He has successfully euchred all attempts to stop him and has never been off his feet. The Brooklynite is a two-fisted puncher who bangs away from gong to gong.

Last year Horne went the distance with Graziano and finished strong. He's the guy who ended Rocky's sensational knockout splurge. Sonny is speedy and dangerous—a good combination boxer-puncher.

Enjoy the excitement, blow-by-blow, on Gillette's Cavalcade of Sports over American Broadcasting Co. and WMAL (630 on your dial), 10 p.m.

And remember, men . . . LOOK sharp! FEEL sharp! BE sharp! Use Gillette Blue Blades with the sharpest edges ever honed!

Cards Lose Again on Mize's Homer

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ST. LOUIS, MAY 1.—Seventy1year-old Sam Breadon, who has seen his ball teams win nine pennants, flew East yesterday to seek the answer to the popular question in St. Louis, What's wrong with the Cardinals? That there is something radically wrong with the Cardinals is easily seen by the league standings which show them in last place.

POVICH

It's all very unbecoming to a club that won the National League Pennant last year and then slapped down the Red Sox in the World Series, but as of this morning there they were with a seven-game losing streak and looking like a team that had no spring training. Moreover, their league batting champion, Stan Musial, is hitting .146.

The Cardinals have been floundering about like a hopeless outfit. Their pitchers have thrown 13 home-run balls in their first 11 games and have been giving up an average of 10 hits a game while the Cardinals have been held to 6. All of these things apparently are concerning Owner Breadon, who did not deny that one of his purposes in going East was to "have a talk" with Manager Eddie Dyer.

The suggestion that Dyer, a pennant-winning manager, is on thin ice after only 11 games of the following season has been made despite Breadon's denials. In St. Louis, it is recalled, that Breadon flew East a few years ago with his team in a slump and replaced Ray Blades as manager with Billy Southworth.

AS USUAL, reports of dissension on the club are accompanying the Cardinals' slump, and the belief has been expressed that the team lacks the sage counsel of Mike Gonzales, who left the Cardinals to operate a team in Cuba. Significance is attached to the fact that Dyer is still a sophomore manager, operating this year without Gonzales' knowledge of the league and the hitters, but Capt. Terry Moore of the Cardinals ridicules that line of thought.

"The whole club is just like a good hitter in a slump. Our timing is off, that's all. The boys feel badly about not winning for Dyer, a great guy," says Moore. "And as for the absence of Gonzales, let me put it this way: Last year a few of the boys came to me and asked me to suggest that he be taken off the coaching lines. So let's get that straight."

A year ago at this point the Cardinals were in first place and threatening to run away with the pennant. Today they're six full games behind the league-leading Dodgers. It was supposed to be a two-team race with the Cardinals having the Dodgers to beat. Now they have the whole league to beat. Breadon might examine his own actions to discover what's really wrong with the Cardinals. He sold off so many players his reserve strength is pitifully inadequate along with the slump of his regulars.

THE SPORTING NEWS is now engaged in a poll of the leading hitters of the American League to learn if they recognize a difference, if any, in the liveliness of the ball now is use. Certain hitters have complained that the ball is deader than last year. Buddy Lewis and Mickey Vernon of the Nats have their own versions of the liveliness of the ball.

Lewis, who was leading the league in hitting this morning with a .452 average, said: "I don't know whether the ball is livelier or not, but I'm not going to complain."

Vernon, who was barely batting .200 a couple of days ago, merely grinned when asked if he thought the ball was livelier. "I don't know," he said. "I've not been hitting it."

There has been the suggestion that because of the greater number of homers in the National League and the frequency of shutouts in the American that the balls used by the two leagues are different. That's right, they are different. They come out of the same factory, but the American League ball is stitched in red, the National League in blue.

THERE IS DOUBT if an American League race ever has been so close at this stage of the season. Going into today's games, the last-place Athletics were only two games behind the league-leading White Sox.

The best illustration of how a club can go up and down in the standings was offered by the Nats in Chicago yesterday. If they had won their game with the White Sox, they would have gone into second place. They lost, and dropped all the way to seventh.

Browns Give Nats 14 to 5 Walloping

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

St. Louis, May 1.—The Nats got a bad break from the weather man today. The trouble was the sun came out 10 minutes before game time, chased the rain away, and compelled the Nats to get all involved in a ball game with the Browns. They took a complete pasting, 14 to 5, and dropped into a tie for eighth place.

Jeff Heath raised the loudest disturbance. He walloped Walter Masterson's pitching for a home run with one on in the third inning, and another homer with one on in the fifth, that were sweet to his feel inasmuch as he was traded away by the Nats last summer.

Nat Hurlers Give 20 Hits

Four Washington pitchers pitched 20-hit ball, which sheds some light on the proceedings. Masterson, who held the Yankees to three hits in his last start, was clouted for 10 hits before he retired with nobody out in the fifth. Ray Scarborough and Luther Knerr also got the full treatment from the Browns. Young Scott Carey held the Browns scoreless in their last inning.

It was a wild afternoon, with rain threatening to halt the game in the fifth when the Nats were trailing 9-2, but after a half hour's delay the Nats were led back to the slaughter.

The game was distinguished for the fact that Joe Grace, on the third pitch of the game by Jack Kramer, belted the Washington club's first home run of the season into the right center pavilion. The Nats' 1-0 lead lasted no longer than it took the Browns to get to bat. Dillinger's double, first of his four hits, and two infield outs promptly tied the score at 1-1.

The Nats moved in front again, 2-1 in the third, when Lewis walked, Vernon singled and Travis produced a long fly, and then the Browns bounced back with three of their own. They were a pure gift from Vernon, who with two out and none on, permitted Zerilla's wind-blown pop to fall behind him for a cheap double. A bit later Stephens singled, and Heath popped a homer onto the rightfield roof.

Browns Hammer Masterson

The Browns really showered down on Masterson in the fifth. Stephens tripled to right center, Heath popped another homer clear over the roof in right, and Witte doubled to left. Scarborough came in and gave up the fourth run of the inning.

The game went ludicrous in the sixth when Knerr took the mound. Grace misjudged a high fly by Dillinger in the young gale that was blowing and it fell for a double. A bit later, Heath got a wind-blown single on a high pop that dropped at the feet of Priddy and Christman. They filled the bases when Lehner's ground ball hit Umpire Hubbard on the leg for an automatic single. And then on Judnich's moderate fly to center, Spence slipped and fell on the wet turf and the Browns got their fourth hit and third run of the inning.

They weren't through, though. Dillinger singled against Knerr in the seventh and Rookie Ray Coleman, up from the Texas League, clouted his first big league home-run over the right field roof for the Browns' last two scores.

Nats Cut Lead—Briefly

At one point, the Nats did sort of get back into the ball game, when they came up with three runs in the sixth and cut the Browns' lead to 9-5.

Travis doubled to center, Christman singled to center, and Kramer gave the Nats two more runs by making a wild throw past first base on Robertson's tap to the right of the box. It was all pretty useless, though, what with the Browns scoring in all except the second and eighth innings.

THE "MOUTH" OPENS—Larry (The Mouth) MacPhail, boss of the New York Yankees, steps toward Baseball Commissioner Happy Chandler's office in Cincinnati, where he'll talk by request for a change. He's answering Chandler's summons to explain why he didn't keep quiet, as ordered, after Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn was suspended from baseball for a year

'No Lulls in Conversation'

Happy, Larry Say 'Nothing' After 6-Hour 'Conduct' Talk

By Fritz Howell

Cincinnati, May 1 (AP).—Leland Stanford (Larry) MacPhail, boss of the New York Yankees, and Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler set a long-distance conversation record today and then told sports writers they "had nothing to say."

The "nothing to say" statement came after they had spent six hours and 40 minutes in a man-to-man talk, both missed their lunch by some five hours, Chandler canceled a golf date, and 13 scribes and six photographers were kept waiting outside during the conference.

MacPhail Leaves Grinning

The usually talkative MacPhail, who had been ordered to appear at the commissioner's office to explain why he had violated Chandler's silence edict after the suspension of Dodger Manager Leo Durocher, emerged from the conference room, faced the scribes with a twisted grin, and said:

"Gentlemen, I'm sorry I'll not be able to help you. If you want any information you must get from this office."

As MacPhail sauntered down the hall from Chandler's office, amid the flashing of cameras of photographers, Walter Mulbry, Chandler's associate and spokesman, came into the smoke-filled anteroom where the reporters were assembled.

"There is no story, gentlemen, Mulbry said. "The colonel and the commissioner, as you know, have talked about 6½ hours on a variety of subjects. The colonel is flying back to New York at 6:55 p. m."

Mulbry, answering a barrage of questions, said no date for a future meeting had been set, that he doubted if a statement on the meeting would ever be issued, and that no date had been set for a Chandler conference with Del Webb and Dan Topping, coowners of the Yankees.

Not a Shot Was Fired

Asked if he would say whether the Chandler-MacPhail conference had been a peaceful one, Mulbry answered:

"Now that's something I wouldn't care to comment on. However, there were no lulls in the conversation."

Mulbry continued: "The commissioner will see no newspapermen or photographers, and will answer no questions."

One newspaperman who trailed MacPhail while the others awaited the nonexistent statement from Chandler, said the Yankee president strolled into a hotel bar with two friends.

"Larry bet Dan Topping $1000 in February that he wouldn't take a drink before May 1," the newsman said. "Well, here it is May 1."

The Yankee baseball boss had made it clear before the meeting that he was prepared to challenge Chandler's authority to seal the lips of anyone. Furthermore, he said, he found nothing in Chandler's contract which empowered him to suspend a man without advising the club owners of the precise charges against him.

It was MacPhail who brought Durocher before the commissioner. It occurred after he had filed defamation charges against the manager and Branch Rickey, head of the Brooklyn club. Both clubs were fined $2000 for "engaging in a public controversy damaging to baseball."

Door Remains Closed

Once the door marked "Baseball" was entered by MacPhail this morning it remained closed. At five o'clock this afternoon the conference continued. If the men had anything to eat, it must have been stored in Chandler's office ahead of the meeting.

A floor of telegrams, however, reached the baseball commissioner's office during the day.

It could not be learned from whom they came—whether from fans, personal friends of the debaters or from the moguls of baseball.

Warren C. Giles, president of the Cincinnati Reds, said he doubted that any man in baseball would enter into the controversy.

"I cannot imagine anyone in baseball sending any telegram trying to influence the commissioner's decision in a situation none of us in baseball knows anything about," Giles said in a telephone conversation.

Kentucky Derby Field Cut to 12

By Bob Considine

Louisville, Ky., May 1 (INS).—Twelve nervous nags, each of whose wealthy owners would willingly donate an arm to gain a victory, will file into the starting gate for the seevnty-third running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

A thirteenth by name of Master Mind, one half of a pair of thoroughbreds nominated by Mrs. Doddge Sloan, was pulled out of the contest late today. The remaining names will be tossed into a hat tomorrow morning for their post positions in the big event, at which time their owners will each pay a $1000 starting fee.

The field could still go 10 to 13 as owner W. M. Peavey announced that his Jett Jett may go to the post.

To the winner, now generally suspected of being C. V. Whitney's Phalanx, with Eddie Arcaro up, will go $91,750 of the total purse of $118,750.

Second place will add no lustre to the runner-up but his owners will win a consolation prize of $10,000.

Prizes For All

Third place is worth $5000, fourth place $2500 and additional bundles of lettuce will be distributed to the trainers and breeders of the horses in the money.

It came up considerably muddy today, to dust off a hardy clip of horse racing, and if the gooey park at Churchill Downs until the stuff hangs around the old horse-derby is run, many bettors are expected to shun Phalanx and Warren Wright's sterling Faultless in favor of Elizabeth Graham's Jet Pilot, an animal with a pig's touching love for wallowing in wet earth.

A lot more than money will be riding on the strong back of Phalanx, a big hard-hitting son of Pilate out of Jacola. Arcaro, the banana-nosed little riding wizard, drove Phalanx to an impressive win in the $40,000 Wood Memorial at Jamaica the Saturday before last. He said today that if he doesn't get blocked off he's a cinch—it will send the little Italian down into racing history as the first jockey to win four derbies. His others came in 1938, on Lawrin, Whirlaway in 1941 and Hoop, jr., in 1945.

Tied for Tops

At the moment he stands tied with Earl Sande and the almost legendary Negro jockey Isaac Murphy.

A win for Phalanx also would bring the name of Whitney back to front, after man expensive years in the ruck.

Trainer Ben Jones is doing his best to fan the racing strip a little drier to help his Faultless, winner of the Flamingo, the Blue Grass Stakes and the Derby trial. The jet-brown Bull Lea colt has won six out of eight this year and his last three outs, but has never even worked out in mud, much less run in same.

A victory for Ben's horse would be Jones' fourth derby and toss him into a tie with the late "Derby Dick" Thompson, who sent the late Col. Ed Bradley's four winners to the post.

Interest Slipping

Jet Pilot could do much to restore Elizabeth Graham's interest in racing if he can repeat his victory over the derby horses he ran down and left behind in his last start at Jamaica. Mrs. Graham lost a vast fortune in horseflesh just a year ago when her Chicago barns burned. Jet Pilot, then a two-year-old, was saved by a quirk of fate which sent him on to Churchill Downs just before the fire.

The costliest horse in the dozen starters will be Harry Warner's Step Father, purchased at the L. B. Mayer disposal sale for $200,000. The Beau Pere colt has shown nothing except a few fair finishes that brought him up near contention. He looked especially bad the other day in the Derby trial.

Fans Going After Tickets For Big Event

A BRISK SALE of tickets for The Post-sponsored National Celebrities Golf Tournament, May 17-18 at Columbia Country Club, was reported yesterday, first day the pasteboards were available to the public. The event starts at 1 p. m. each day.

Over 300 tickets were eagerly snapped up by fans who do not care to miss the opportunity of seeing such celebrities as Generals Eisenhower and Bradley, Admiral Nimitz, Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Fred Waring, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Tommy Armour, Bobby Jones, Babe Ruth and many other prominent personalities playing in the same tournament.

Tickets are priced at $3 for the two days; $2 for either single day and $1 for juniors. They will remain on sale daily.

To Miss Gertrude Connor, of Alexandria, went the honor of purchasing the first ticket. She was waiting in The Post lobby at opening time and took six of the pasteboards. (See picture this page.)

Dodgers Bump Chicago, 5-2; Increase Lead

Brooklyn, May 1 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers won their initial 1947 series from a Western team today by downing the Chicago Cubs, 5-2, in the rubber game of a three-game series at Ebbets Field.

The victory enable dthe Brooks to increase their National League baseball lead to a game and a half over the rained-out Pittsburgh Pirates who supplanted the Bruins in the runner-up slot.

Brooklyn jumped on Starter Bob Chipman, who had defeated the St. Louis Cardinals in his previous two outings, for three runs in the second inning on two hits and four walks and added single tallies in the seventh and eighth off Russ Meyer.

Kirby Higbe started for Brooklyn but gave way to Rookie Ed Chandler in the sixth after the Cubs loaded the bases with two out on Bill Nicholson's double and two walks. Chandler induced Dom Dallesandro to fly out to end the inning and gave up but two hits the rest of the way.

Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers doubled in the first inning to end a hitless string at 20.

Colts Sign End On Prexy's Hunch

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—With Coach Cecil Isbell of the Baltimore Colts beating the bushes for talent, President Bob Rosenberg has unearthed a prospect here for the club in the All-American Football Conference.

Rodenberg announced yesterday signing of Bill Irwin, a 6-foot end. If Irwin makes the pro grade he will do it without benefit of college experience.

Irwin ended his schooling upon graduation from Riverside Military Academy in New York. But during the war he played outstanding ball with the Navy team in Hawaii.

He was picked on the Sailors' all-star team against a similar group from Army.

Irwin teamed with Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones, star of last season's Cleveland Pros, to form a passing combination that set up two scores and a 14-0 win over Army.

Irwin is the thirty-third player under contract to Baltimore.

Williams-Zannelli Meet on May 9

Boston, May 1 (U.P.).—National Boxing Association Lightweight Champion Ike Williams of Trenton, N. J., and Ralph (Ripper) Zannelli of Providence, R. I., will meet in a 10-round bout at Boston Garden May 9, it was announced by the Goodwin A. C. today.

The bout, scheduled for tonight, was postponed because Williams reportedly was injured in training. In another 10-round match Gus (Pell) Mell of Montreal and Patsy Brandino of Hamilton, Ont., will fight a return bout. Mell won a split decision a week ago.

Two Players Fined

Kansas City, Mo., May 1 (U.P.).—Fines of $25 each were assessed against Manager Bill Meyer of the Kansas City Blues baseball club and Gus Niarhos, catcher, for their run-in with Umpire Buck Hicks in last Sunday's game against Milwaukee, Frank Lane, American Association president, announced today.

Giants Win, 6-5, on 8th Four Bagger

New York, May 1 (AP).—The home run bat of big Johnny Mize struck again today and the blow enabled the New York Giants to defeat the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, 6-5, and sweep their three-game series from the sagging title holders.

Mize came to bat in the seventh inning with the Giants trailing by one run and Bobby Thomson on base via a double, and promptly rifled a pitch off reliefer Ken Burkhart into the upper rightfield stand for the ball game. The homer was his eighth of the season, top output in either league.

Eighth Straight Loss

The setback was the eighth in a row suffered by the Cards, their longest losing streak since 1938 when they suffered a similar number of consecutive reversals.

The Red Birds, as they did yesterday, jumped out in front in the initial inning by scoring twice on three singles and an outfield fly and drove Starter Dave Koslo to cover in the following frame by tallying three items on three hits, a walk and two groundouts.

Brazle Chased

However, the Giants came back in the bottom half of the second and registered three times to knock Southpaw Al Brazle from the hill. Sid Gordon, who broke up yesterday's game by doubling home two runs in the ninth, tripled two teammates plateward to highlight the rally. The Giants added another run in the fifth to set the stage for Mize's payoff wallop.

Red Bird President Sam Breadon, who flew in from St. Louis last night to confer with Manager Eddie Dyer and find out first hand the reason for his team's debacle, witnessed the game from the office of Giant President Horace Stoneham.

Catholic U. Downs Loyola

After five straight losses, most of them by one or two runs, the Catholic University nine broke into the win column yesterday on its home field with a 5-2 margin over Loyola of Baltimore.

The Cardinals, who accounted for six safeties, saw Pitcher Kingsbury go the rout to hold Loyola to four hits.

Loyola goth both its runs in the first inning as the shakey Cardinals committed three of their four errors. The hosts bounced back, however, with three runs in their first time at bat as Loyola's Pitcher Boche walked the first two men to face him. Another walk and two singles gave C. U. the clinching pair of runs in the third.

Union Eyes N.Y. Ball Clubs

New York, May 1 (U.P.).—The New York Yankees, New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers today became the newest targets in Boston Attorney Robert Murphy's campaign to unionize Major League baseball players.

The Rev. William Kelly of the State Labor Relations Board said last night that Murphy, who failed in his attempt to organize the Pittsburgh Pirates last year, has obtained issuance of a complaint of unfair labor practices against the three metropolitan teams.

Murphy charges that the club officials supervised formation of a players' committee and coerced the men in the exercise of their rights to self-organization.

Father Kelly said a hearing was scheduled for June 4. He said that issuance of the complaint merely set the stage for a formal hearing and did not indicate a decision by the labor board.

DEAR FOLKS:

A record breaking entry of 65 yearlings has been made for the 13th annual show of Maryland-bred yearlings to be held on the Pimlico clubhouse lawn at 10 a. m. Thursday, May 8. Humphrey Finney, field secretary of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association, reports that the four classes in the show have all been well supported, with 28 entries in the group for fillies, sired and foaled in Maryland and 24 in the class for colts of this category. All told, 36 breeders in the State are represented in the show and the yearlings named for it are the get of 31 different stallions now standing in Maryland. Judge of the show will be the veteran trainer, Max Hirsch, who last season conditioned King Ranch's Assault, the Triple Crown winner, and later scored in the Pimlico Special to earn the title of "horse of the year." The withdrawal of Calumet Farm's Armed from the Dixie Handicap will result in a larger field on May 10. The son of Bull Lea and Armful has not completely recovered from injuries received at Gulfstream Park. From the field of probable starters, King Ranch's Assault and Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' Stymie will receive the bulk of the fans support. BILL.

OUTSIDER came with a belated rush in the stretch but could not reach the winner. RELIOUS raced gamely and weakened. REMISION tired. CASH O BOY closed some ground. GENIAL SAM S. had tired speed.

Brandy Punch Second, Two Lengths Back

Pimlico, May 1.—Stanley Sagner, Baltimore clothing manufacturer, saw Saggy, his bargain colt, score his most impressive victory to date in annexing the ninth running of the Ral Parr Stakes by two lenghts over Cedar Farm's Brandy Punch.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Brass Band was third 2½ lengths back and a head to the good of Ella K. Bryson's Equibit.

There were 14,585 fans on hand to see Saggy ring up his fourth straight victory and earn $7485 for his owner. The Swing and Sway colt purchased by Sagner for $4700 at Pimlico last fall has yet to taste defeat.

In his last start he set a world's record, :51 4/5 for 4½ furlongs in winning the Aberdeen Stakes at Havre de Grace. His time for the distance today was :54 1/5 which was excellent over a track termed good. The strip was drying out fast but was a trifle dead. The track standard is :52 3/5 held by Hasteville.

The four-horse field was off in good order, Saggy was sent through on the rail to take the lead. Brandy Punch ranged along side and the two colts fought it out through the stretch. Saggy held a head advantage an eighth of a mile from the wire and drew clear as Brandy Punch weakened. Bras Band and Equibit were outrun throughout.

After his smashing victory in the Aberdeen, Saggy was made a prohibitive favorite and paid $3.00.

Two maidens made up the winning daily double of $101.80. Hibernian, winner of the first race, was making his twentieth start in the past two years. He was driven to a head victory by Jimmy Lynch and paid $25.40 straight.

The Baltimore-owned Bobanet Stable of R. Bruce Livie accounted for the second race for 2-year-olds when Punxsy closed fast to win by a length. She was favored in the betting and returned $7.40 for $2 tickets.

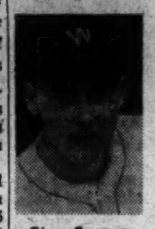
The favored Strolling On won the third race, a steeplechase, for the favorite players to pay $4.00. Jockey P. Smiley aboard Thomas T. Mott's Ossabaw provided the excitement. The 13-year-old gelding led over the twelfth jump only to have his saddle slip. Smiley did extremely well to make the final three jumps without mishap and complete the course.

Playing the Game

This is the tenth of a series of articles on inside baseball by Washington's Nats in conjunction with the Walter Johnson memorial program for boys.

By Stan Spence
As told to Shirley Povich

THROWING THE BALL is as important a part of outfielding as catching it, and the boy with a poor arm is not welcome in anybody's outfield. But hustle and good judgment can go far to offset what may be a weak throwing arm.



Stan Spence

On outfield catches with men on base, the important thing is, of course, to take the ball at my left shoulder or perhaps a bit higher, the better to get it away quickly without a windup.

Some players may not have the strong arm to get a ball into the plate fast, but there is no excuse for a player not being able to get it to the other bases quickly and accurately. All that requires is practice.

The first rule for an outfielder to remember is always to throw ahead of the runner, never behind him, or he'll take an extra base. The smart outfielder anticipates the play before it happens, knows the speed of the runner, and always presumes that the next ball is going to be hit at him.

The score and the stage of the game often determines which base an outfielder throws to. If it's close in the late innings, then the outfielder's big concern should be in trying to keep the tying and winning run off second base, where it is in scoring position. That's the time to play it safely and get the ball in to second.

* * * *

It's the slow hit ground ball that is the biggest test of an outfielder. He has to hustle on that one.

In fact, he should hustle on every hit. Getting to the ball quickly means he has a shorter throw to the base if he has to throw. And get the ball in low, so it can be cut off, if necessary.

If you happen to juggle or boot a ground ball on the hop, it's too late to throw to the base you intended to throw to if you had fielded cleanly.

Now the smart thing to do is throw to the next base. And if you catch a ball and find you are taking two or three steps before throwing it in, that's too many. One step before throwing is the most a good outfielder can take.

Korean Stars Will Run Here

Three ace Korean long distance runners announced yesterday that they will run exhibition races in Washington and other American cities in a neffort to stimulate American interest in long distance running.

Suh Yun Bok, recent winner of the 26-mile Boston Marathon, Sohn Ki Chung, winner of the marathon race at the 1936 Olympic games, and Nam Seung Yong, who finished third at the Olympics, will appear at several District track meets in the near future.

The three great marathon runners received the backing of every athletic organization in the Washington Area yesterday at a luncheon in the National Press Club. Representatives of the various athletic groups were enthusiastic about the Koreans' willingness to stimulate interest in track among the youngsters in this country.

A Korean-American committee to foster long-distance running and amateur participation in sports was named at the luncheon. The committee will arrange for the runners to appear at area track meets.

Named to the committee are E. Joseph Aronoff, president of the District AAU; Jerry Looney, Washington director of track and field; Edward Rosenblum, executive director of the Jewish Community Center; Charles Reynolds of the Boys Club of Washington, and John Leiss, chairman of the long-distance running committee of the District AAU.

Also Dr. Robert T. Oliver, of the Korean Commission; George Maines, representing veterans' groups in the District; Mike Lynch, nine times participant in the Boston Marathon; Sae Sun Kim, of the Korean Commission; Dr. James Shin, former star Korean athlete at the University of Hawaii, and Harry Childs, of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

High Leaders Resume Three Way Battle

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Eastern, Wilson and Coolidge resume their three-cornered fight for the interhigh baseball championship today in the feature of today's four-game league card.

Eastern entertains Central, Wilson invades Western, Coolidge journeys to Anacostia, and McKinley plays at Roosevelt, all games starting at 3:15 p. m.

The Ramblers, Tigers and Colts are each undefeated in two games and are tied for first place.

Hustling Eastern, who won the crown in 1944 and '45, only to lose it to Coolidge last season, have been led by their pepper-box catcher, Sal DiGiorgi and Pitcher Bernie Myles. DiGiorgi is clouting .800, and Myles' two starts so far have resulted in a one and two-hitter, each a shutout victory.

Wilson's Tigers have been getting steady hitting from Catcher Pat O'Neill and Second Baseman Eddie Frager, and clever pitching from Tom Evans. Myles and Evans will both take the mound today and each will be the favorite to win.

Coolidge, with their double no-hit expert of last season, Tex Jones, on the mound, will also be favored over weak-hitting Anacostia. But it is evident that all is not well in the Coolidge camp and they may be in for an upset. There has been disension among certain veterans of last year's title-winning team.

Boby Jones, who twirled a no-hitter for Tech last week against Anacostia, will toe the slab again today, this time against Roosevelt, which was held to one hit by Myles last week. Bobby, who was kayoed by Coolidge after five innings in his first start, will be out to prove that his performance of last week was no fluke.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by W. E. G.

HACK CENSUS

Eddie O'Neill, of 4809 S. 28th st. Arlington, Va., writes:

EDDIE

"On the 7:30 bus, en route to St. John's High School, lots of us read The District Line, and we figure you can settle a dispute for us.

"We've been arguing about how many different taxi companies there are in the District. Do you happen to know?"

I count 66 different listings in the phone book, Eddie, but that probably includes a little duplication since some companies are also members of "associations."

A more interesting question is: What happens to all 66 of them the moment it starts to rain?

ABOUT PHONES

David A. Jernigan called the other day and said, "Maybe you can help me. You're the only one I can think of with the operators on strike.".

"What's the complaint," I asked, mentally reviewing some of my recent errors.

"I'm on the Columbia telephone exchange, and I'm trying to get a Ludlow number. I dial, but nothing happens."

I jotted down the vital statistics, and called a gentleman named Hill, at the phone company. He fixes everything for me. The explanation is this:

The Ludlow Exchange is the only manual ring board in Washington. Your dial call eventually reaches an operator, who completes the circuit and rings the number—and you can hear the "audible ring" if you're patient.

The patience is necessary because right now the Ludlow board is carrying a heavy load—and it sometimes takes many seconds before you hear the "click" that means the ringing is about to start.

PAWETTES

I have just learned a new word.

A group of former employes of the Petroleum Administration for War is planning a reunion, and all members of the old gang are asked to contact Anne Riccardello at REpublic 7500, Extension 4495.

The announcement is signed by "A former Pawette"—and within 15 minutes I had figured out the derivation of the term.

THOSE FLAGS

Mrs. Donald Henderson's offer to tub a couple of the flags at the Iwo Jima statue has brought a varied response.

J. W. W. observes that they're State flags, but makes no move in the direction of his wash tub.

Mrs. Herbert Cochran, of 4213 Tuckerman st., Hyattsville, Md., matches Mrs. Henderson's offer to launder a couple of the flags and adds that she can do some mending, too, if its' needed.

John L. Richards, jr., commandant of the local detachment of the Marine Corps League, commends Mrs. Henderson's concern over the condition of the flags, and indicates they've already been taken care of. He says:

"The flags are now in good order. When they become weatherbeaten, they are changed."

While he's about it, Richards extends an invitation to the public to attend Memorial services at the statue at 2 p. m. May 30.

ONE-ACT DRAMA

As the curtain rises, we see a fruit vendor industriously polishing five big red apples.

When the apples have been shined to perfection, he stacks the five glistening pieces of fruit into a neat pyramid, and steps back a pace to admire his handiwork.

Four policemen enter from right, and greet the vendor in unison.

As the four pass, each grabs one of the shiny red apples, and they exit left, munching heartily.

The curtain falls slowly, as the vendor eyes his one remaining apple.

ELEVATING ITEM

The National Capital Astronomers will meet at 8 p. m. Friday to hear Dr. Joseph Kaplan, of the University of California.

We're told that Dr. Kaplan will talk about his laboratory studies on the composition of the high atmosphere, and of solar-terrestrial relationships.

While you're about it Doc—you haven't seen the cost of living up there, have you?

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are declarer of today's seven-heart contract and West opens the jack of clubs, which you win with the king. You next take the ace and king of hearts, West showing out on the second round. Study only the North and South cards; then plan your play.

South wins his grand slam by massing a safety play in diamonds. He has no spade, heart or club losers so the grand slam seems to depend on finding the adverse diamond split 3-3, but it would be overly optimistic for declarer to draw the last trump, hoping to find a favorable diamond break. He must try to insure against a 4-2 division.

After taking the second round of trumps declarer cashes the king, ace, queen of diamonds. If East had only one of two diamonds originally he can ruff, but in this event declarer would have a diamond loser anyway.

Declarer's hope, in the event that diamonds are bunched, is that East, the defender who has the outstanding trump, is also the defender long in diamonds. This distribution prevails and declarer is able to ruff his losing diamond on the board. He returns to his hand by trumping a spade, draws the last heart and claims the balance for a grand slam at hearts.

Life's LITTLE DRAMAS as told to BART HODGES

ATWATER KENT
Philanthropist

On a sunny afternoon in 1903, I bounced along Broad st. in Philadelphia in my new red automobile. It was the latest thing out—a single cylinder Rambler that looked more like a buggy than the automobile of today.

A policeman on a bicycle overtook me, and ordered me to follow him to the police station.

In the small precinct station I was brought before a rotund magistrate with a walrus mustache. As we entered he pushed aside his game of solitaire, dubbed his cigar, removed his derby and banged his gavel on the desk. The hall of justice was officially opened.

Before his honor, I was charged with "scorching"—a term applied to bicyclists who went too fast in city areas.

I protested. "What manner of measuring speed have you? How can you tell I was scorching?"

The judge glared at me. "We've got a system," he snapped.

"Yer honor," said the policeman, centering himself before the judge, "this man was going so fast I had to really puff to catch up with him."

"Did you puff fast, or just medium?" questioned his honor.

"Fast—real fast" answered the policeman.

"Five dollars for scorching!" barked the judge.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy, 4, Spent Summer With Grandmother Two Years Ago; She Loves Him Dearly But Kept Him Up all Hours; Now She Wants Him Again

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a four-year-old son. Since my divorce three years ago I have been teaching and making a living for us, with some help from his father. I love my work and have been most fortunate in getting good care for my son.

For the past two years I have attended summer school, doing work on an M.A. degree at a large university in another city. The first summer I took my son to stay with his grandmother on his father's side. She has been very friendly to me and loves the boy.

However, her method with him are not mine. After his six weeks with her, I couldn't help but note that I had more difficulty making him mind. He was nervous and I learned that he had been taken out night after night to visit friends and kept up until 10 or 11 o'clock, or sometimes until midnight. His bedtime at home is 8 o'clock.

Are Such Visits Harmful to Boy?

HIS GRANDMOTHER is very kind to him; but he may eat anything, get whatever he asks for, etc., when with her. She pays no attention to things like that, which I am very careful about. Also there is an atmosphere of tension in the household—nothing you can exactly describe, just something you feel. My mother-in-law is a bundle of nerves herself.

The second summer I paid for my son's care here and everything went well. Now she has written to say she wants him again this summer. He is two years older, of course, and with expenses so high it would be a big help to me to take him there. Also, I don't want to hurt her feelings, because she is big-hearted and kind.

So there is my problem. Am I making a mountain out of a mole hill? Can a period of six weeks with his grandmother hurt him? The most important thing is that he grow up to be healthy, a good citizen and a Christian. Could six weeks with his grandmother at the age of 4 hinder that? Please advise, as I must reply to her letter soon.

A. D.

Children Thrive On Staying Put

DEAR A. D.: A major mistake to be avoided is switching your child about too much, or back and forth unnecessarily, from one caretaker situation to another. This applies especially to the necessarily rather lonely and emotionally disturbed child of divorce.

Continuity of experience in a familiar set-up which he finds tolerable gives him maximum sense of security, hence has maximum beneficial effect on nerves, appetite and health generally.

Thus if your child fared well and seemed satisfied in the boarding arrangement you made last summer—which I infer kept him on a more healthful regime than his grandmother offers—and if that arrangement can be repeated, I think perhaps it would be a better deal so far as he is concerned than trading on the grandmother's hospitality as an economy measure.

Warm Hearted Care Has Value

THERE is no doubt that warmhearted care, even of a slapdash or somewhat slovenly quality, often does more for a child's vital energies than impersonal ministrations that are hygienically attuned to the book and the clock. But the best way to judge between the comparative merits of a summer with grandmother versus a summer of paid foster care is to study the effects upon the boy.

And from what you say, you were satisfied with last summer's results, but more than a little disturbed by those of the summer before.

It seems to me the boy himself might provide a clue to guide you aright in making a final decision. Have you tried feeling him out about a preference? Not that direct or invidious questions should be put, of course. Rather, talk to him in terms of the coming summer and hark back lightly to his memories of last summer—to test his emotional reactions.

If he seems pretty glum about last summer and a bit uneasy about what's coming next, then perhaps warmhearted grandma, for all her shortcomings, might be a better stand-in for you than a paid caretaker at his present age. But if he takes a happy tone about last summer, I think you'd be wise to repeat the arranagement. M. H.

Ask Anne
Your Questions On Homemaking

My bedroom furniture is blond mahogany. The drawers and tops are decorated with a tiny gold stripe. How can I clean this furniture? Can soapsuds be used? There are a number of scratches on the dresser top, and it appears that the finish has been scraped off. Can this be sanded down and new finish applied? How would this affect the gold stripe?

The furniture can be washed with soap and water—be sparing with the water—or with commercial furniture wash.

The dresser top scratches can be repaired, but the top should be refinished if the original finish has been scraped off. Use commercial paint and varnish remover according to the manufacturer's directions. Then sand and refinish. The gold stripe will come off in the process.

Would like to know how I can remove blood stains from a green lizard bag and shoes. On Easter, I boiled eggs in a new aluminum kettle and it turned black. How can I get that to shine once more? W.E.F.

Try wiping the shoes and bag with a cloth wrung out of cold water. Rub dry. Or use a leather cleaner and conditioner intended for reptile.

Boil vinegar or cut up raw lemons and water in the aluminum kettle. Cooking acid foods like tomatoes or rhubarb in aluminum will brighten it. The food will not be harmed.
